GENERAL NOTICES

Offices: Salisbury Square, London, E.C.4.

Inland Telegraphic Address: "Testimony, Fleet, London." Cable Address: "Testimony, London." Telegraphic Code: "C.I.M.," C.M.S. Edition. Telephone: City, 7994 (3 lines).

Hours of Business: 9.45 A.M. to 5.30 P.M.; Saturdays, 9.45 A.M. to 1 P.M.

GENERAL POLICY, etc.—All communications as to the general policy of the Society with regard to ecclesiastical matters, and any letters to be brought officially before the General Committee, should be addressed to the Hon. Clerical Secretary.

CONTRIBUTIONS to the General, Appropriated, Special or Medical Mission Funds should be sent to the local treasurer, or may be paid at any time at the Society's House, Salisbury Square, E.C.4, or to the Society's bankers, Williams Deacon's Bank, Limited, Birchin Lane, E.C.3, and in Ireland at the C.M.S. Office, 21, Molesworth Street, Dublin. Cheques and postal orders sent direct to the Office should be made payable to "The Church Missionary Society," and crossed "Williams Deacon's Bank, Limited," and addressed to the Lay Secretary. Contributions should be accompanied by full particulars as to whether they are to be credited to any Association, or as "Paid Direct," and if for the General or any Appropriated Fund.

SPECIAL REQUEST re CONTRIBUTIONS.—The Committee wish to impress upon local secretaries and treasurers that at present, whereas the expenditure is spread fairly equally over the whole year, a large proportion of the income is received during the last few months of the year, and to ask:

1. That efforts may be made to obtain subscriptions at an early date in the financial year which closes on March 31.
2. That at the end of every month all moneys lying at the local banks or in the hands of treasurers may be forwarded to the Lay Secretary.

If this were done, a considerable amount each year would be saved in interest on loans.

It would greatly minimize the work at Head-quarters if parochial associations would forward all contributions through the central treasurer for either their deanery, archdeaconry, or diocese.

EDITORIAL.—Communications as to literary matters and subjects connected with the contents of the publications of the Society should be addressed to the Editorial Secretary.

CANDIDATES.—All inquiries as to offers of service in the foreign field and the training of candidates should be addressed to the Secretary of the Candidates Department.

FOREIGN.—Letters connected with the details of the ordinary work abroad should be addressed to the Foreign Secretaries. Those connected with Medical Missions should be addressed to the Secretary to the Medical Committee.

HOME ORGANIZATION.—The Home Department is under the control of the Home Secretary, to whom all correspondence should be addressed. He will welcome personal conference regarding any matter connected with the work of the Associations throughout the country. Correspondence regarding "Own Missionaries" should be addressed to the Lay Secretary. Arrangements for Sermons and Meetings in connexion with Associations will be made by the Organizing Secretaries for the respective districts, a list of whom is given on page viii.

For information regarding the work and needs of Educational Missions, application should be made to the Secretary to the Educational Committee.

Inquiries relative to the Medical Mission Auxiliary, and applications for deputations or special literature, should be made to the Organizing Secretary for Medical Missions.

Applications from Gleaners', Young People's, and other Unions, for deputations to meetings, and ordinary correspondence, should be addressed to the respective Secretaries.

Correspondence with regard to the subject of Missionary Study and in connexion with the Circulating Library should be addressed to the Assistant Secretary for Missionary Study.

Orders for and correspondence regarding the supply of the Society's Publications should be addressed to The Manager, Publishing Department, but remittances should be made payable to "The Church Missionary Society." The Society's publications may also be obtained through any bookseller, or from the Society's Agencies at Belfast, Birmingham, Bristol, Derby, Dublin, Exeter, Liverpool, Manchester, and Nottingham.

Applications for the loan of Lantern Slides, kinematograph films, linen pictures, wall maps, costumes, curios, books, etc., should be addressed to the Secretary, Loan Department, C.M. House; applications for Missionary Exhibitions to the Secretary, Exhibitions Department.

Except under very special circumstances, there is always one or more of the Secretaries in attendance who may be seen during office hours.

The Committee meet at the Society's House on the Wednesday after the second Tuesday in each month, at Eleven o'clock.

A Prayer Meeting for friends of the Society is held at the Society's House every Wednesday from 4 to 5 P.M.

RULES FOR THE DISTRIBUTION OF THE REPORT

I. The Full REPORT

This consists of a complete list of missionaries, the annual sermon, a detailed account of the work in the Missions, statements of accounts, and the contribution list for the diocese in which the donor lives (in the case of direct contributors, the direct lists are substituted for the diocesan). Bound in paper boards, cloth back only, this is supplied free of charge to the following friends:—

1. Clergymen who are supporters of the Society.
2. Officers of Parochial Associations.
3. Secretaries and Treasurers of Diocesan, Archidiaconal, and Decanal Associations.
4. Honorary Governors and Honorary Members for Life.
5. Life Governors (Benefactors of £50 and upwards in one sum).
6. Annual Governors (Subscribers of £5 5s.).
7. Annual Subscribers of £5.

C.M.S. Workers who are not entitled to the full REPORT can purchase it for 1*s.* post free.

II. The Short REPORT, entitled "To All the Nations" (in brown paper cover), consists of the General Review of the Year, four pages of pictures, and the contribution list for the diocese in which the donor lives (or the direct lists). It is supplied free of charge to—

1. Members of the Society who are not entitled to the full Report.
2. Subscribers and Collectors (including boxholders) of sums of 4s. 4d. per annum and over (next year the amount will probably be 8s. 8d.).

III. The Annual Report with Complete Contribution Lists (bound in blue cloth). The following officials are entitled to receive this Report:

1. Vice-Presidents of the Society.
2. The elected members of the General Committee.
3. The Members of the Home and Foreign, the Finance, and the Estimates Committees.
4. Deanery Secretaries, and Correspondents for Women's Work.

A limited number of copies of this Report are available for sale at 3*s.* 6*d.* net.

STATISTICAL VIEW OF THE SOCIETY'S MISSIONS

NOTES

Col. 11. A station is a place where at least one foreign missionary resides regularly, or an ordained native with a similar status and responsibility. Different points of occupation in a city are considered as one station.

Col. 12. An out-station is a place, other than a station, with a resident native agent.

Col. 13. Organized congregations are normally those sending delegates to church councils which have taken a permanent form.

Col. 14. Communicants are counted again as baptized adherents.

Col. 18. Definite instruction is contrasted with mere church attendance.

Mauritius.—The Society's work in the Mission was transferred to the diocese in June, 1919, and no returns are therefore given in this year's tables. This affects the grand totals for 1919–20 (columns 8–34). The European missionaries and native clergymen are still numbered among the Society's workers (see p. lvi.).

LIST OF STATIONS AND MISSIONARIES

On 1 June 1920

 A STATION is a place where at least one foreign missionary resides regularly, or an ordained native with a similar status and responsibility, so that the place may be occupied by him in one year and by a foreign missionary in another. The main stations (where there is more than one in a Mission) in the following list are prefaced by a numeral to promote facility of reference in using the index on p. lxiv. The post-town of each station, when it is known, is given in parenthesis after the name of the station, except in cases where the station is itself a post-town. Where not otherwise stated, it may be assumed that the stations which are not numbered have the same post-town as the main stations after which they appear. For Palestine, where there is no delivery of letters, it is desirable to address letters intended for the stations which are not numbered to the "care of" one of the missionaries at the main station. The figures immediately after the name of the station or post-town refer to the year in which the station was first occupied. The word "vacant" under the name of a station indicates that there was no foreign missionary or native clergyman resident there on 1 June, 1920.

The figures after the names of the foreign workers show the year of their first sailing for the Society's Missions, or of their reception into connexion in the field. Missionaries' wives take the status of their husbands as concerns local connexion. The university or college of the workers is indicated after their names, and the nature of their work is shown in some cases after the date of their joining the staff.

The figures after the names of natives (clergymen or laymen) show the date of ordination as deacon, or of acceptance as a missionary.

The terms "Hon." and "Partly Hon.," in parenthesis, after the name of a missionary, mean that such missionary draws no allowances, or only a portion of the usual allowances. In the case of the Colonial Associations the missionaries have been selected, and, when necessary, also trained by the Associations, by which likewise they are supported in the field. The Canadian C.M.S. also has selected men and women for the Society's Missions, but they are sent out and supported by the Missionary Society of the Canadian Church, of which the Canadian C.M.S. is financially an integral part. In nearly all the instances referred to, the C.M.S. is responsible for all other than personal allowances, as well as for the expenditure which is involved in the maintenance of the work.

The maiden names of wives of foreign missionaries, and the year of marriage, when known, are given in parenthesis. In the case of each woman who was a missionary of the Society before marriage, the Mission in which she laboured and the year of joining it are stated; and in the case of a woman who was a missionary of another society, the initials indicating the society are given, as well as the country in which she worked and year of joining. Wives of missionaries are always expected by the Society to lay themselves out to do good among the native women in every practicable way, such as by cultivating familiar intercourse with them, educating children, and instructing the adult women.

The names of missionaries in the field are placed under the stations at which they were working on 1 June, 1920. The names of those who were then at home, or on the way home, or on the way out, are placed under the stations at which they last resided, save that those who were then on the way out and had been assigned to some other stations are put under those stations, and those who were on extended leave appear under a special heading at the end of their Missions. The names under each station are printed in order of date, without reference to nationality, sex, orders, or other difference; except that the secretaries of Missions are placed first in order at the stations where they reside, and wives of missionaries are placed immediately after their husbands. The names of the clergy of the Sierra Leone Native Church and of the district councils in Nigeria, Bengal and Bihar, and South India are arranged alphabetically.

At the end of the list are given the names of accepted missionaries who have not yet sailed.

The following signs and abbreviations are used:—

* "Own Missionary," that is, connected with, and, as regards personal allowances, wholly or partially supported by, individual friends of the Society or by the associations or other bodies whose names are given in brackets.

† Local connexion, that is, that the offers of service were accepted by the Society's representatives in the several Missions, or, in Canada, by the Canadian bishops.

THE ANNUAL SERMON

Preached at St. Bride's Church, Fleet Street, 3 May, 1920

BY THE

BISHOP OF DORNAKAL
A Vice-President of the Society

"THE NATIONS SHALL WALK BY THE LIGHT THEREOF; AND THE KINGS OF THE EARTH WILL BRING THEIR GLORY INTO IT; AND THEY WILL BRING INTO IT THE GLORIES AND THE TREASURES OF THE NATIONS."—Rev. xxi. 24, 26, R.V. and Moffat.

THESE words occur in that glorious vision of the new Jerusalem that St. John has portrayed for us in such rich colours in the closing chapters of the Book of the Revelation. We may not be far wrong if we interpret the vision as an inspired description of the ideal of the Church of Christ in her final consummation. The details of the picture bring before us in quick succession the chief characteristics of the Church of Christ—characteristics true of her, even to-day, with all her limitations and imperfections. The ideal is not yet attained, but the Church is certainly moving towards the ideal. "The city," it is said, "comes down out of heaven from God"—thus the seer signifies the heavenly origin of the Church and her divine mission. It is said to have come down "with the glory of God"—thus St. John may be referring to "the light of the knowledge of the glory of God" that shines through the saintly lives, the gospel preaching, and the self-sacrificing service of the thousands of its devoted citizens in every land and in all ages. Its wall is said to have been great and high, the Church being preserved and protected by the indwelling Spirit, with its foundations well and securely laid in the pure apostolic teaching of the truth once for all delivered to the saints. The dimensions of the city—1500 miles in each direction—possibly indicate in picture language the vast extension and expansion of the Church throughout the whole world. It is said to lie "four square"—suggesting, perhaps, the solidarity, the harmony, and the comprehensiveness of catholic Christianity. It needs no material temple; its temple is the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb; the divine presence is eternally in it, and access to God is open and direct, "realized in the person of the sacrificed and exalted Christ." The city of God needs no created light; the glory of God illuminates it constantly; "the Lamb is the light thereof."

Not satisfied with this magnificent description of the City of God, all glorious within, the seer paints, by a few strokes of his pen, the Church's relation to the world. "Nations," he says, "shall walk by the light thereof." It is by the Church's light that nations are illuminated and guided. True, often this light has been dim and the guidance uncertain. True, that instead of being guided by it, nations have often stumbled at it, and yet, as the late Professor Swete has told us: "The Church alone possesses an unfailing source of illumination which radiates far beyond her borders. Nations not yet Christian reap the benefit of Christian opinion and Christian standards of life. Whatever there is in modern life which promises amelioration of social evils is certainly to be ascribed to the influence, direct or indirect, of a dominant Christianity even where the influence is most stoutly denied."[1] Yes, nations, the nations of the world, are even to-day walking by the light that emanates from the Church.

Secondly, the seer speaks of "the kings of the earth bringing their glory into it." This was an ideal that the Psalmists of the Old Testament loved to picture for the age of the Messiah. "Because of Thy temple at Jerusalem kings shall bring presents unto Thee," said the poet who sang Psalm lxviii. "The kings of Tarshish and of the isles shall bring presents: the kings of Sheba and Seba shall offer gifts; yea, all kings shall fall down before Him; all nations shall serve Him," was the optimism of the author of Psalm lxxii. We do not yet see all the kings of the earth falling down before Him, and all the kings of the earth bringing their glory into the Church. But the prophecy is being fulfilled as states, kingdoms, and nationalities accept His sway and offer their wealth for the honour and extension of the Kingdom of Christ.

Thirdly, the seer says: "They will bring into it the glories and the treasures of the nations." The Church in the seer's vision is the sum total of the glory and treasures belonging to the nations of the earth. The seer prophesies that "all that is best in human life will flow into the city of God," and evidently foresees the consecration to the service of Christ of the art, literature, and science of all the nations, and of the talents, the genius, and the gifts evidenced in all national character and in all social systems. All these national characteristics, transformed and ennobled by the reinvigorating touch of Christ and purified by the power of His Spirit, will constitute the heritage which will permanently enrich the Church.

Lastly, the seer paints the Church as she exercises her healing influences over the nations. A river issues from the throne of God and of the Lamb, "a river of water of life," bright as crystal, and on this side of the river and on that side was the tree of life, bearing twelve manner of fruits, yielding its fruits every month; and "the leaves of the tree," he says, "were for the healing of the nations." Even as the river in Ezekiel's vision issued from the temple-rock, and, running eastwards, flowed through the wilderness, and falling into the Dead Sea converted its bitter waters into fresh water, replacing death and curse by life and fruitfulness, so does this river of St. John, issuing "in the midst of the street" of the city of God, bring healing and blessing to the nations of the world. "The Church is the healer of the diseases of humanity."

These word-pictures of the Prophet are no empty dreams, but great realities. They furnish, perhaps, the greatest arguments for the missionary work of the Church in all ages. A diseased humanity needs the Church. An incomplete Church needs the glories and treasures of the nations to bring her to perfection. "The missionary obligation of the Church," as Bishop Gore has said, "depends no doubt chiefly on the command of Christ: 'Go ye, and make disciples of all the nations.' But it is made intelligible when we realize that Christianity is really a catholic religion, and that only in proportion as its catholicity becomes a reality is its true power and riches exhibited; each new race which is introduced into the Church not only itself receives the blessings of our religion, but reacts upon it to bring out new and unsuspected aspects and beauties of its truth and influence."[1]

The missionary societies of the West have, under the blessing of God, undertaken this work on behalf of their Churches. We thank God, on the one hand, for the enlightening and healing influence they have exerted on the nations of the world; and, on the other hand, for helping the African, the Chinese, the Japanese, and the Indian to bring his own peculiar gifts and treasures for the enrichment of the Church. The ideal, however, has not yet been reached. There is much work yet to be done. There are still nations and races in India and other lands that have not come under the sway of the Lord Jesus Christ. And even where some have come under His gracious influence they have been so fettered and trammelled by the traditions and peculiarities of the mother-Churches that they have had little scope or freedom to develop their church life along their own lines. Yes, the consummation is not yet in sight, but we most devoutly thank God for all that is being done towards it in every part of the globe.

The great Society whose anniversary we are celebrating this week has taken a foremost place in this work. I can only speak, with any personal knowledge, of its work in India. A little over a hundred years ago the Society began operations in India, and to-day there are over a quarter of a million Christians who owe their place in the Church to the work of this Society; and the number is growing every day. The simple, virile, and generous Tamil villager; the patient, receptive, and loyal Telugu mass movement convert; the polished, intellectual, and patriotic Brahman of the North and South; the bold, self-confident, and aggressive Punjabi—have all found through the missionaries and agencies of the Society their full and growing life in Christ. The Shanar and the Vellala of Tinnevelly, the Mala and the Madiga of the Telugu Country, the Santals of Bihar, the Chamars of the United Provinces, the Mahars and the Mangs of Western India are all being enriched by the knowledge of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and in their turn are enriching, and ought to enrich, with their varied gifts the Church in India.

And here you will pardon a personal reference. It is an interesting coincidence that in this year of the centenary of the Society's work in Tinnevelly this pulpit should be occupied by the son of a convert of the Society in that district. Nearly ninety-five years ago was born in one of the sandy villages of Tinnevelly a boy who, when 14 years of age, left his Hindu father's home and sought the great missionary, John Thomas, to learn of the religion of Christ. Under his sympathetic guidance he was baptized, educated, and trained to be a teacher, a catechist, the head master of a boarding school, and, finally, for twenty years a pastor in one of the largest churches in the district. His youngest son, who has the honour of occupying this pulpit this evening, was born in a C.M.S. parsonage, received his first schooling in a C.M.S. village school, was educated in a C.M.S. high school and a C.M.S. college, and was dedicated from birth to the ministry of the Church in connexion with the C.M.S. Not very different his, perhaps, from the story of hundreds of men and boys who under the providence of God owe to the Church Missionary Society their place in Christ, in the Church, and in the State. I offer with you to-day my whole-hearted praise and thanksgiving to our loving Father for all that He has accomplished in India through the instrumentality of the Church Missionary Society.

Fully conscious, then, of the great part taken by the Society in the work of building up the City of God, I invite your attention to-day to a few outstanding features of the present situation in India, and to a few problems that press for solution.

The first thing we have to recognize is that we have in India, as the result of a century of Protestant missionary work, an Indian Christian community of nearly one and a half million souls, the greater portion of which is in South India. It consists of peoples of many races, speaking many tongues, and grouped under many missionary societies. And yet, as is evidenced by such institutions as the All-India Indian Christian Conference and the National Missionary Society, there is throbbing in this scattered and divided community a common life with a common hope. This, together with the ancient Syrian Christian community, is becoming increasingly a mighty factor to be reckoned with in the national life of the country. Among the Indian leaders of the Churches in South India may be counted a member of the Legislative Council, judges of the law courts, scores of government servants as magistrates, sub-magistrates, doctors and engineers, and members of city and town municipal corporations. Apart from the men holding these responsible positions, the community has given to the country schoolmasters and schoolmistresses out of all proportion to its number.

The development of this community is not homogeneous. Some members, like those in Tinnevelly and Travancore and the large city congregations in the North and the South, are greatly in advance of others in education and influence. Others, as in the mass movement areas of the Punjab, Western India, the United Provinces, and the Telugu Country, are in an infant stage, requiring a great deal of training, nurture, and discipline before they can be built up into useful citizens of India and fit to take their full part in the life of the Church. This difference in attainments and progress must be clearly kept in mind when we consider the problems of self-support and self-government.

Speaking generally, in most Churches there is a growing sense of responsibility for the evangelization of India. People are beginning to realize more than ever before that India must be evangelized by Indians, and that the Church in India ought to be the most important factor in the task of the Christianization of India. The National Missionary Society collects from all parts of India over Rs 30,000, and conducts missionary operations in five different fields. The Indian Missionary Society of Tinnevelly, founded seventeen years ago by a few Christians of the Church in the Tinnevelly Diocese, has now been taken up by the Tamil Christians of the dioceses of Tinnevelly, Madras, Colombo, and Rangoon, and raises over Rs 18,000 for the work in the diocese of Dornakal. The increasing hold that these missionary societies are having on the love and prayers of the people is most hopeful. These are the two largest indigenous missionary societies; but most missions have their own small home missionary societies, run by Indian members and supported mainly by Indian money. Besides these missionary efforts, a great impetus to personal evangelism has been given to many Churches by the Evangelistic Forward Movement. Every communicant member is encouraged to take some definite share in preaching the Gospel in his neighbourhood. Thousands of voluntary workers have thus engaged in evangelistic work during the period of special effort. A great many do regular evangelistic work throughout the year. Both in the Telugu and the Tamil Country a large proportion of the converts is the result of such voluntary effort of the Christians themselves.

Another most interesting development of recent years has been the formation of church councils for bringing the missionaries and the Indians together in closer co-operation in the administration of the work. Since the Edinburgh Conference, missions have given greater and more prominent recognition to the fact "that we have now to deal not with scattered individual converts under the wing and protection of the missionaries, but with a Church which, though an integral part of the universal Church, is fast progressing towards its own characteristic organization and its own corporate life." The C.M.S. has the honour of being foremost in the organization of church councils in the Missions connected with it. These councils, composed of representative clergymen and a body of laymen elected by the communicant subscribers of each parish, constitute a very real training ground in church self-government. They draw out the latent capacities for leadership in the clergy and the willing co-operation of the lay membership.

A greater degree of self-support always follows a greater devolution of responsibility. For twenty-seven years the district church council of Tinnevelly has administered all village education, all pastoral and evangelistic work in the whole of the C.M.S. area, with 73,000 people under its pastoral care and over 800 on its roll of Indian workers. Over Rs 100,000 is contributed by the people every year towards the expenses of the council. Recently this council took over also the responsibility for financing and directing the work of the C.M.S. College, Tinnevelly. The Telugu Mission, though about forty years younger than Tinnevelly, has just been given a new constitution giving the Indian Church council a similar control over all its village education and all its pastoral and evangelistic work. In Madras City and Bombay the Indian church councils, though smaller in their spheres of activity, are under the successful leadership of Indian clergy, and are entirely controlled by Indian Christians.

Not only in what may be termed "mission" administration, but also in ecclesiastical affairs, the co-operation of the laity is becoming real and important. In the exercise of church discipline, for instance, there has been for years hearty co-operation between the laity, the clergy, and the bishop. Every case requiring discipline in the Telugu Country, in the first instance is gone into most carefully by lay committees, and their recommendations form the basis of the bishop's decisions. In the newly organized diocesan councils every parish is represented by its lay and clerical delegates, and the Church of England in India will have in the near future a representative assembly symbolizing outwardly nearly 300,000 Christians, both Indian and European.

While these are no mean achievements, and we thank God to-day for all these results, we must also face the tasks before us and the problems they present to the Church. As we contemplate these we are compelled to exclaim with the great empire-builder: "So much to do! So little done!"

1. First and foremost comes the problem of the unevangelized millions yet untouched. It is reckoned that there are over 100,000,000—a third of the entire population of India—still beyond the reach of the existing missionary organizations. Large districts in the North and the whole of many Indian subordinate States have so far had no chance of coming under the influence of the Gospel. How can these races bring into the Church their glories and treasures if they are not won for Christ? There are vast areas where the outcastes have not yet been approached by any messenger of the Gospel. It may be safely asserted that there is no reason why mass movements should not begin among these neglected races everywhere, if only the Church would seriously undertake the task of receiving them and bringing to bear upon them the regenerating power of the Holy Spirit.

The new political situation created by the introduction of the constitutional reforms is another reason for a forward movement all along the line. Greater than ever before will be the cry now for a new race of politicians, for men of irreproachable character, of transparent honesty of purpose, of absolute unselfishness and of catholic sympathy—men whose all-embracing patriotism will expose and rectify all that is narrow, impure, and selfish in the social and national life of the people. The Church, the Church of Christ, alone possesses the unfailing secret of such a character. The Cross of Christ is at once the ideal and inspiration of such a life. There can, therefore, be no slackening of efforts at this juncture. From every point of view this is a critical time in the history of India, and I appeal to the Church of England for sympathy and patience and also for a real strengthening of the Christianizing forces in that sister country in our empire. To whom shall we look for this help but to the Church of the empire with which the political destinies of that ancient country are permanently united? Cān there be any resting on our oars until all the races of India have learnt to walk in the light that emanates from the Church of Christ and the new national life of India is dominated by the Spirit of Christ?

2. Next comes the problem created by the mass movements. I have already touched upon this, but the subject requires special consideration by itself. It may be reasonably stated that with adequate men and money the 50,000,000 outcastes of India can be brought into the Church in our generation. In different parts of India the people are pressing into the Church more rapidly than the Church is prepared to receive them. Once more: "the Kingdom of God suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force." The immediate motive that is behind the movement is different in different places; sometimes it is education, sometimes social uplift, sometimes caste persecution, always improvement all round. But to any one who believes in the operation of God's Holy Spirit it is merely His voice through these outward circumstances, beckoning these peoples to find their full life in Christ. Is it any wonder if these neglected races, who for thousands of years have borne patiently and uncomplainingly the tyranny of a mistaken religious system, gladly hear the call of Jesus Christ to those that labour and are heavy laden, and come to Him to find rest for their souls and bodies?

The Church Missionary Society is having the privilege of dealing with these movements in the Punjab, in the United Provinces, in Western India, in the Telugu Country, and in Travancore. On an average over 200 people are received into the Church every week by baptism. The number is not larger, because there are not enough teachers to instruct them and train them in the Christian life. The resources at the disposal of the missionary are deplorably inadequate to meet the situation. Boarding schools have not sufficient accommodation to take in all the boys and girls who are ready to come in to be educated as our future workers. Training institutions cannot accept a sufficiently large number of men and women for training for want of scholarships. The inflow of new workers in consequence in piteously restricted, and the opportunity placed at our very door is in danger of being lost. And yet who can deny that the movement is at once the Church's grandest opportunity and its chiefest glory?

It has sometimes been said that in reaching these outcastes we do not touch Hinduism and do not help in building up the real Church of India. That is very far from the truth. When we put forth our best efforts to bring the 50,000,000 outcastes into the Church of Christ we attack Hinduism at its most vulnerable point. Nay, more: winning them means the defeat of Hinduism. The strength of Hinduism lies in its social structure and its caste usages and laws. To take these millions into the Church and to give them equal opportunities with the highest class in Hindu society and to raise them to a position of honour, self-respect, and service for the country is a task that most certainly will knock the bottom out of the structure of Hinduism. Moreover, whether it is a Brahman or an outcaste, a Hindu is a Hindu; and both equally can lay claim to national characteristics woven into their very being by generations of religion and tradition. Converse with any thinking outcaste for half an hour, and you will find that in the background of all his religious thought is the recognition of one God, supreme and unknowable; of minor gods, to be feared and propitiated; of caste, a divine institution, binding on all and serving as the chief instrument of reward and punishment; of transmigration, the inevitable result of all action; and of freedom from rebirth, the only heaven man has to look for. These certainly are the permanent elements of all Hindu religious thought.[1] On the other hand, the all-pervading sense of divinity; the recognition of the reality of the unseen and the eternal; the sense of solidarity in family life; the almost universal, though often misplaced, spirit of charity; the spirit of cohesion within select groups—these and many other precious assets of national character will be conserved for the enrichment of the Church of India, whether it is made up of converts from the upper or the lower strata of Hindu society.

But the attainment of this result is no easy task. It involves the instruction of the adult, the education of the young, the training of the teacher, and the provision of pastoral supervision. It is not the evangelistic missionary that is required for these areas, but master-builders, men believing in the possibilities of personalities touched by the Spirit of God, leaders who by sympathy and love will draw out the treasures lying hidden in these people, so that they may become an adornment to the crucified Saviour and an asset for the spreading of the Kingdom in India. Education is the greatest need—education of the people, education of the young, education that will touch the whole life, education that will train leaders, and education that will make these millions worthy citizens of India, and no less worthy members of the city of God. We thank the missionary societies of Great Britain and America for sending out a commission under the leadership of that great missionary educationalist, A. G. Fraser, to study this very thing. Much is expected of the commission. But whatever may be its recommendations, we hope that no sacrifice will be considered too great, and no outlay too costly, to place the education of the Christian people on a satisfactory footing. One of the greatest services that the Church in England can render to India at the present moment is to throw her whole available strength into the work of receiving and raising these people that the Spirit of God is driving into the Church. In a caste-ridden land like India, where religion and religious philosophy have aided the inborn selfishness of the human heart in confining a sixth of the population to degradation and misery, there can be no higher testimony to the power of our living Lord than the regeneration and recreation of these down-trodden races into communities of noble manhood and womanhood enlisted for the service of humanity.

3. Thirdly, the relationship between missions and the indigenous Church is another problem calling for thought and action. This is a problem that affects equally but differently all parts of the mission field. It may be safely asserted that in many of the larger missions the time has come for greater recognition to be given to the Church as the chief factor in the evangelization of India. The time when the mission was the prominent partner is fast passing away in these fields, and the time has come when the Church ought to occupy that place. In almost all fields careful watch must be kept over the development of the community, so that the devolution of responsibility from the mission to the Church may be carried out wisely and steadily, and that at every stage of development, in all departments of work—both transferred and reserved—Indian co-operation and counsel may be secured at once, and complete self-government may be prepared for and consummated in the future.

The All-India Missionary Conference of 1912, held in Calcutta, under the presidency of Dr. Mott, passed the following resolution: "This Conference would emphasize the principle that the work carried on by foreign missionary societies should be gradually transferred, as opportunities offer, to the Indian Church, and that suitable plans and modifications of existing organizations should be adopted, wherever necessary, so that this principle may be carried out by missionary bodies." The principle underlying the resolution is now universally accepted by all missions, and many steps have been taken by different societies to give effect to the resolution. But the progress is all too slow. The situation demands a more vigorous and bolder policy. The hearty co-operation of the Indian leaders is most essential for the missionary enterprise of the future. Moreover, the educated young Indian Christian is naturally being thoroughly permeated with the new national spirit of the country. It is important that his love, sympathy, and service be won for the Church and the missionary cause. The Hindu, too, is watching with keen interest the place that the Indian Christian is taking, and is invited to take, in the work and government of the Church. "Responsible government," "Home rule," "Transferred and reserved subjects"—these have become familiar phrases in modern India. Is it to be wondered at that the Indian Christian is attracted by the glamour of these ideas, and expects it in the sphere of church and mission administration?

Courageous action should therefore be taken everywhere to devolve responsibility of some kind or degree from the "mission" to the "Church." Where a complete transfer is not immediately possible, the giving of full responsibility in certain departments and the securing of Indian co-operation and counsel in all branches of work must be the rule, and not the exception, in mission administration. This devolution and co-operation should not depend solely on a money test. Again and again we have seen that the policy of trust and confidence and of devolution of responsibility is what secures greater self-support and greater efficiency in administration. In spite of all exceptions and disappointments, as a rule the bearing of responsibility breeds a sense of responsibility, and confidence begets trustworthiness. The time must come soon when, at least in the older fields, all the missionary work under the foreign missionary societies must become obviously and permanently related to the Church in India. This does not mean that these fields will not require men and money any longer. The Church will still require all the sympathy and help that the older Churches of the West can give it for a long time to come. Even if the Church in some of the districts should become entirely self-supporting to-morrow, yet, for the training of the workers and of the clergy, for manning the educational institutions for its youth, for conducting its colleges and hostels for non-Christians, and for developing in its workers a strong spiritual life and a spirit of self-sacrificing service, it will need for some long time to come the best men that the Church and the universities of the West can produce. Financial support, also, will still be required for the training of the clergy and other leaders of the Church, until Indian Christians themselves can equip and endow their own theological colleges.

But the centre of gravity must move unmistakably from the mission to the Church. You will still send men, but to be associated with the Church in India, and to labour with its leaders for the Christianization of the nation. Only, the men you send out will be men in full sympathy with Indian Christian national aspirations; men who will be more conscious of their relationship to the Church in India than of their connexion with the society that sends them out; men who will find their joy in identifying themselves with that Church and serving that Church, thus, perhaps all unconsciously, making their peculiar contribution to the Church in India. You will still send money, but not as a means of holding the converts in bondage to a particular sect or a particular view, but to help the Indian Church, as long as it needs such help, to carry out its own programme for the fulfilment of its mission to the nation. Possibly you still will be required to give your thought and counsel to the problems of the work; but largely it will be to enable the Church in India to come to its own, so that "the glories and the treasures of the nation" may be brought into the Church of Christ, and that the light of God proceeding from it may guide the destinies of the many races yet outside it. All this is no mean service. Perhaps it requires the greatest self-abnegation and the wisest Christian statesmanship that missionary societies and individual missionaries have ever been called upon to exercise. But will the daughter Churches in India look to the older Churches of the West in vain for this important service?

4. The next problem is that of the freedom and independence of the Church in India. Here I am only thinking of the Church of England in India. The national spirit of India demands liberty for the Church founded through the work of the great missionary societies of the Church of England. As one of the church papers said some time ago: "There is a passion for self-government to-day in the Church among Indian Christians which we cannot afford to ignore. When the State is determined on a unique experiment for advanced self-government among the hundreds of races and nationalities of India and its 300,000,000 of peoples, fearless of the imputation of rashness, the Church of Christ cannot rest quiescent."[1] The Church surely cannot lag behind the State. "Make your Church the Church of India, I will join it to-morrow; but do not ask me to join a Church of England," said a Bengali leader to me some time ago. While discussing at an important assembly the name by which the Anglican Church in India should be known, one of the most prominent Indian Christian leaders made this passionate appeal for "a Church of India": "Give us," he said, "a Church of India, something which will be our very own, something for which we can live and die." And this is not merely a sentiment.

At present the Church of England in India is under very serious limitations. It is, of course, legally bound to the Church of England. We may not subdivide a diocese or consecrate a bishop without obtaining the sanction of the Government of India and a mandate from the King. We are bound to the Book of Common Prayer with possibly all the rulings of the Ecclesiastical Courts of England and the decisions of the Privy Council. Theoretically, at least, these judgments are forced upon the Indian clergymen, though the controversies that gave birth to most of these decisions can have no meaning to them. The clergy, before their ordination, have to make the declaration that they "assent to the Thirty-nine Articles of Religion, and that in public prayer and administration of the Sacraments they will use the form prescribed in the Book of Common Prayer and none other, except so far as shall be ordered by lawful authority," and yet "lawful authority" must make very considerable alterations in the forms, prayers, and offices, before they can be made really suitable to Indian village congregations. Moreover, the genius of a people like those who have been gathered into the Church from Hinduism and Islam cannot very well find natural expression in forms drawn up for the use of the Christians in England some 300 or 400 years ago. One of the Thirty-nine Articles says: "Every particular or national Church hath authority to ordain, change, and abolish ceremonies or rites of the Church ordained only by man's authority, so that all things be done to edifying"; but as far as India is concerned the Article has been inoperative. You can now perhaps understand the cry: "Give us a Church of India, a Church that will be our very own, for which we can live and die."

Difficulties in the way of the attainment of this end seem many and great. But none are too great for the power of the Holy Spirit. It may be well perhaps to indicate what is worthy of keeping as our ideal. The Church of India must be an integral part of the catholic Church throughout the world. It must be in communion with the Anglican Communion that has given it birth, and yet it must have liberty to develop along indigenous lines. It must not be organized on racial lines; it must include in it the European and the Indian, and yet neither the one nor the other should be hampered by restrictions contrary to the liberty of the Spirit and inimical to the healthy growth of the spiritual life of either. Ideally, it must include in it all who accept Jesus Christ as Lord and Master, the Word and the Sacraments as their law and mainspring of life, and the coming of His Kingdom as their one object of fellowship and service. It should not be tied to a Government that at any time may become entirely hostile; it should, however, be the salt that gives the savour to the national and political life. Can these be combined and secured for the Church of India? That at least is worthy of the most earnest prayers of God's people and the highest effort of missionary societies and church leaders.

5. Fifthly, and lastly, comes the problem of church union. The Church in the homelands is so mixed up with the Churches in the mission field that one cannot move without the other. And yet the problem is less difficult in India, China, Japan, or Africa, than in Europe or America. Here we speak of reunion; there of union only. The Indian Christians who now find themselves in different groups did not go out of fellowship from any Church, but are loyal conformists to the Church into which they and their fathers were baptized from the very beginning. They find themselves one with most of their fellow-Indian Christians in what they consider the essentials of our holy religion.

> We are not divided,
> All one body we,—
> One in hope and doctrine,
> One in charity—

can be heard sung as lustily by men of several Churches as by those within one communion. Naturally, they desire visible unity with one another. The theological differences between the Churches hardly appeal to the layman. "Why are you a Baptist?" was the question recently asked of one of the leading Indian Christian laymen in South India. "I am a Baptist not because of theology, but because of geography," was the thought-out reply. Men have naturally allied themselves to the Church of their missionaries and of the societies that brought them to the Saviour. What the "colour" or church polity of the missionary society is, that has come to be the colour or the church polity of the converts. This is only inevitable. But at a later stage, when the converts begin to come into contact with converts of neighbouring areas, often of their own race and clan—then the restrictions in fellowship and communion imposed upon them by their respective Churches, or even by sects and parties within the same Church, begin to irritate them. Of course, it sometimes happens that some Indian Christians are so grounded in the peculiar doctrines and practices of one particular sect that they may be seen to cling to them more tenaciously, because more blindly, than their missionary fathers. Despite all this, the great majority instinctively count themselves to be one.

Moreover, Christians of different denominations possibly move much more closely with each other than in the homelands. The Young Men's Christian Associations, the Indian Christian Association gatherings, united colleges, Student Movement conferences, and evangelistic campaign conferences—these and such-like bring all Indian Christians together for common objects, and "the Church" often appears to be the only thing that separates those who otherwise are longing, praying, and working together for the evangelization of their country. This state of affairs certainly is not healthy for the cause of the Church in India.

Then again, the great need for advance along every line forces one to contemplate with sadness the terrible wastage of forces caused by duplicating men and machinery in some of the fields. Closer co-operation between missionary societies within our own Church, and union with those now outside, both at home and in the mission field, will undoubtedly lead to great saving in man-power and in outlay in institutions, training schools, and colleges.

What shall we say about the effect of such a union on the non-Christians? A visibly united Church will certainly give a powerful witness to those now outside the Church. Was not that the prayer of our blessed Lord: "That they may all be one . . . that the world may believe that Thou didst send Me"?

These considerations have led Indian Christians to ask whether the Churches cannot come together in visible unity in one United Church of India. But, naturally, all are not yet ready for this. Some have already spoken. Let me quote from a statement drawn up by an informal conference of some Indian ministers of the Church of England and of the Congregational-Presbyterian body, known as the South India United Church. "We believe," they say, "that the challenge of the present hour in the period of reconstruction after the war in the gathering together of the nations and the present critical situation in India itself, calls us to mourn our past divisions and turn to our Lord Jesus Christ to seek in Him the unity of the body, expressed in one visible Church. We face together the titanic task of winning India for Christ—one-fifth of the human race. Yet confronted by such an overwhelming responsibility we find ourselves rendered weak and relatively impotent by our unhappy divisions—divisions for which we were not responsible, and which have been, as it were, imposed upon us from without; divisions which we did not create, and which we do not desire to perpetuate." The responsible authorities of the South India United Church have now formally passed the acceptance of what is known as the "Lambeth Quadrilateral," and have invited the Anglican Church on that basis to come into a united Church of India, in fellowship and service. Such an appeal is irresistible.

Unity is the nature of the Godhead. Unity is what our Master prayed for. Unity is the end towards which the Holy Spirit is unceasingly working. The movements towards unity in America, Great Britain, and India are His movements. In the words of Bishop Gore: "Let every man and woman who desires to be a true follower of Christ be preserved from the sin of thwarting by pride or obstinacy, wilfulness or irreverence, the fulfilment of His purpose." This is one of the subjects that is to come before the Lambeth Conference next month, and, may we not say, perhaps the most important subject? The solution cannot be arrived at by a single missionary society, or by the bishops of a single province, but by the goodwill and hearty co-operation of the whole Church. The earnest prayers, therefore, of all who long for unity are needed at this hour that the longings and hopes of the Church in India and other lands may be recognized by the home Church, and that we may all be guided aright in dealing with this question.

The Society whose anniversary we are celebrating to-day has for 121 years had the honour of taking a prominent part in founding Churches all over the world, and in facing mainly the many intricate problems created by those Churches. We in India, your children in Christ, thank God for you, and hold you in great affection and respect. Thousands of your spiritual children from hundreds of Indian villages are praying for you that God may prosper your noble work, and may lead you on from victory to victory until "the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ." We rejoice that God has saved us from the disastrous retrenchments we feared. But we must not forget that many stations and districts are woefully undermanned, and the forces placed at the disposal of the missions and the Churches for the Christianization of India have been cut down in many places to a perilously inefficient level. If at this unique period of opportunity and call in India the Christian witness is not to waver, the forces must be strengthened everywhere. The call of the hour is therefore for advance. The problems we have considered with reference to India probably are not very different from those in Africa, China, and Japan. The whole world is entering into a new age. The Churches in all lands are facing these problems, and are looking to you to help to solve them.

In their scope they touch the whole Church. The call for advance also comes to the whole Church.

God is entrusting you with new opportunities for service and new visions of the future. We doubt not He will grant also new powers adequate to the new calls. As you have followed His leading "to go, make disciples, and teach" the nations of the world, He has been faithful to His promise, and vouchsafed to you His presence and help. He will be with you always, "even unto the end of the world." Go forward, then, with courage and hope, and press forward to the task of building up and perfecting the city of God. Believe in God: Believe in Jesus Christ: Believe in the Holy Ghost: and therefore also believe in the Holy Catholic Church. "Nations shall surely walk by the light thereof. The kings of the earth shall bring their glory into it. They shall bring into it the glory and the treasures of the nations."

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE

General Review of the Year

[READ AT THE ANNIVERSARY IN QUEEN'S HALL, 4 MAY, 1920]

"Stand still, and see the salvation of the Lord."—Exodus xiv. 13.
"Speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward."—Exodus xiv. 15.

On the march from bondage to the promised land a crisis has come. Pharaoh's hosts are behind; the Red Sea in front. The children of Israel are to learn that the crisis is not in itself a calamity, but the opportunity for advance. Truly a picture of all human progress. Sooner or later these impassable barriers arise; the natural man is daunted, he declares advance impossible. A voice within bids him dare and do the impossible. It is the voice of God.

We have come to such a crisis in the history of the human race. Great masses of men all the world over are moving away from a narrow and poverty-stricken life. This is true of the industrial classes of the West, of the outcastes of India, of the pagans of West Africa, and of women everywhere. These movements vary in character, and yet there is an underlying unity, a close relationship. Men everywhere are recognizing the increasing intimacy of these movements; each local movement is part of one great movement in the whole human race. The conscious desire of many who take part in them is for little more than better material conditions, or fuller educational advantages; but underneath is a real, if undefined, desire for a richer spiritual existence. "Heart-hunger" is at work. The Spirit of God is leading the race into a fuller life.

But the promised land can be reached only as these great movements become instinct with the life of God, and this cannot take place in the mass. One by one men must see the beauty of the Christ life and yield to its power; and to the Church has been entrusted this glorious adventure of winning the individual and the world for Christ.

During the last few years missionaries have told us how greatly success or failure depends upon the prevailing mental and spiritual atmosphere. In this year's letters greater prominence than ever is given to the fact. The growth of the Church, whether viewed from the intensive or extensive point of view, is seen to be influenced by the political action of Governments and by international movements among different classes of men. It is therefore with thankfulness and with hope that we record that the League of Nations has now become an accomplished fact. If, as we hope and pray, the League becomes a great power in the world, it will work on the side of the messengers of the Cross. Happy will it be, however, if the Church realizes that the fruition of such hope depends upon her own clear witness and self-sacrificing life. The League depends on the power of Christian character among the peoples which the crucified and risen Christ alone can give, and the realities of the League's position to-day are so sombre beside the Utopian dreams of a year ago that men are more willing to recognize this great fact. The language of the Prime Ministers of the British commonwealth of nations in their New Year's manifesto is deeply significant: "The spirit of goodwill among men rests on spiritual forces; the hope of a 'brotherhood of humanity' reposes on the deeper fact of the 'fatherhood of God.'"

The League of Nations

There are movements, however, which make for an atmosphere hostile to the spread of the Gospel. The spirit of evil was never so active. An insidious power seems to be drawing back whole masses into a bondage more terrible than the past. There are many indications of this, but none is mentioned so often by missionaries as the narrow spirit of a false nationalism. National individuality is a path by which God is leading men into the freer, larger life, but only by a full communion with other nations can such individuality be won and preserved. Where it is the expression of an exclusive spirit it makes for bondage, and this is the defect it reveals in country after country throughout the world. Truly the enemy is at work. In India and the Far East this is plainly and increasingly evident; and the first signs of the baneful influence have appeared even in the heart of Africa. Missionary after missionary from every part of the world speaks of it as a hindrance to the cause of Christ. Christianity is identified with the missionary's country and looked upon as an alien growth. National leaders are fostering the idea; public opinion is being formed; and men find it difficult to become Christians, not only through fear of being considered unpatriotic, but because they themselves are infected with this perversion of nationalism.

False nationalism

The situation is critical and is rendered the more so because the missionary societies are confronted with what at first looks like an insurmountable barrier, like the Red Sea of old. Right across our front line stretches this obstacle, totally unexpected and unpreventable, yet impossible to evade—the extraordinary rise in the rate of exchange. This fact alone is responsible for an addition of £215,000 to the year's expenditure of our Society. And the difficulty is enhanced by the high prices obtaining throughout the East. Through these and other facts the ranks of workers in the foreign field, both European and native, have been depleted to a dangerous degree and the work has been carried on under intense stress and strain. There are signs, however, that God's call to advance has been heard by the Church at home and abroad, and men everywhere, in simple faith, are responding with offers of money and personal service.

Africa

The peoples of Africa are in the swirl of the great movement of the human race. They are beginning to be shaken out of the old mental and social ruts, and are leaving behind their narrow and circumscribed life. Neither the old thoughts nor the old life will any longer satisfy. Idols are being broken and fear of evil spirits dispelled. Nowhere else is Christianity playing so large a part in the human movement. Many who are not Christians share in the fruits of freedom, but the stimulus and impetus come from the Church of Christ. The community life of whole tribes has been raised to a new level; the daily life of the people and the tribal governments are being affected by social ideals manifestly Christian. This is true of Uganda, where native rule is largely in the hands of Christian chiefs, and where—as in most parts of Africa—the education is in Christian hands. It is increasingly true of the Southern Provinces of Nigeria. It is therefore with thankfulness to God that we record a continuance of the mass movements towards Christ. The report for Uganda says:—

Mass movements

> The Church continues to grow steadily in numbers, especially in Teso and the Luo Country, where mass movements are still in progress. The numbers meeting for instruction, and banding themselves into a "Salvation Army" by entirely voluntary organization in the Kavirondo Country, are most extraordinary, and there seems no limit to the possibilities of the movement, owing to the genius of the people for extending and organizing the work.

Archdeacon Owen writes:—

> At Butere our Sunday congregation had grown so much that two weeks ago, on an ordinary occasion, we had about 2000 people. We utilized all our buildings, three in number, to accommodate them, and yet about 300 had to sit outside. A satisfactory feature is the way in which the women's work is keeping pace with the growth of the men's work.

From British East Africa the Rev. A. W. McGregor, of Weithaga, reports:—

> The last year was the most encouraging I have experienced. . . . The outstanding feature is the large number of young men who are putting themselves under Christian instruction and the number who attend the schools. The young men . . . immediately insist on fiancées likewise being taught, so that in a lesser degree there is a similar movement among the girls,

From German East Africa, now known as Tanganyika Territory, the Rev. D. Deekes, of Berega, writes: "We are filled with wonder and amazement and can only attribute the wonderful development and marvellous contrast with how things were at the beginning of the year to the power and blessing of Almighty God."

Equally encouraging is the news from Nigeria in the report from the Owo district:—

> The year 1919 stands out as the most notable year in the history of the Owo district. It has been one of steady growth. . . . Baptisms have for the first time touched 1000, while the contributions to the Owo pastorate have gone well over £1000. Five new out-stations have been opened, and seven new agents added to our staff, while catechumens to the number of 3055 have been publicly admitted during the year. Many new inquirers have also been enrolled.

And the Rev. H. Proctor, whose death has just occurred after twenty-eight years of noble service, wrote from Patani:—

> I think the last six months have been the happiest months of my long experience, perhaps because the Lord has been gracious to me and let me see so many fruits of my labours, or rather of His grace. Numbers have been admitted into the Christian Church. A good number of marriages have also taken place, which is to me one of the best signs of advance we can have. When we have real Christian homes, the couples married in church and their children baptized and being trained for God, we may look forward with joy and look upward with thanksgiving and praise.

Peril rather than progress

But there is another side of the picture. The dominant impression left after reading the missionaries' letters is one of peril rather than progress. The "Red Sea" in the form of shortage of European workers stretches across the path, and the enemy is taking full advantage of it. Heresy is raising its head in more than one quarter. African workers left to themselves often fall deeply into debt, the standard of morals is woefully low, and the Rev. E. T. Pakenham, of Owo (Nigeria), says: "This big congregation of over 400 has only a scripture reader. . . . We might as well put up a notice in many of our churches: 'Sacraments will be administered once a year, if possible.'" And the Rev. A. E. Pleydell, of Maseno, writes: "I have referred in previous letters to a heresy, organized by a young Nilotic man, which has been growing steadily year by year. . . . I state emphatically that leaving the Africans with so little supervision is asking for trouble in this young Church, and a larger staff is absolutely essential to save the situation. . . ."

That the situation is critical can be gauged from the following quotations from men at the front:—

> (1) I believe that if the native tribes of Uganda are left without the supervision of Spirit-filled foreign missionaries at this critical time in their evolution, they will develop into a race of the very worst type of revolutionaries, all of whom will be intensely anti-European. For the native of Africa, a true child of nature, absorbs impressions, whether good or evil, as a sponge adsorbs water.

(2) There is in Buganda a nationalist movement which is giving many officials furiously to think. . . . A great increase of English-speaking natives and a certain amount of nationalist literature have been coming in from Egypt and Ceylon. . . . The formation of a Young Baganda Club has been much aided by young men educated abroad; and while we do not anticipate trouble in the immediate future, yet a more or less anti-European feeling undoubtedly exists, and must influence mission policy to some extent.

(3) The African is advancing rapidly, all too rapidly, on the road of self-determination. The East African campaign has helped to hasten this, as Cape boy has met with Somali, natives of Nyassaland (where the Ethiopian movement assumed serious proportions) with Baganda, West Indian blacks with Nigerians. Pan-Africanism is not very far off; the seed is already sown . . . black versus white will assume terrible proportions unless the native has an education which will build up character. . . . Ethiopianism is coming up steadily from South Africa, Mohammedanism is striving to come down from the North, and both in practice, if not theoretically, are anti-white.

We believe that the Holy Spirit is at the heart of the great human upheaval in Africa; step by step through the Church He has led these people upward and onward, but now, as in all progress, the crisis has come. The issue need not be feared if the members of the Church are faithful and follow the Spirit's leading.

Out of the many events that call for notice, two in Uganda are outstanding: the consecration of the cathedral on the summit of Namirembe Hill, at which service there were present four kings and a president; and a famine, responsible for 30,000 deaths in the Mbale district alone.

Moslem Lands

The issue of the great war is affecting Moslem lands in certain ways which make for the progress of the Gospel. Liberation from a corrupt autocracy, which claimed the sanction of religion, involves in principle intellectual and religious freedom. The Christian missionary must be as free to deliver his message in Moslem lands as is the Mohammedan emissary in Christian countries. And, what is more important, the members of Eastern Churches must be free to evangelize in their own lands, though the impulse to do so will take time and teaching to develop. But there are other resultant forces which cut across this.

Results of the dissolution of Turkey

The dissolution of Turkey has involved the disintegration and the reshaping of the Moslem world, in which State and religion are almost inextricably tied together. A two-fold effect has been produced on Islam. The re-action against the political pressure of western Powers has brought into prominence Pan-Islamism—that is to say, the would-be religious and social and political unity of Islam over against Christendom. On the other hand the political development of nationalities the world over has led to an emphasis on the national allegiance of the Moslem, not only in Moslem lands, but even where he is in a minority; and we see him identifying himself more than before with the nationality and the cause of the land of his birth.

During the past year help in the lands of the Near East has had to concern itself more than ever with the relief of physical suffering. From the hospitals of India, Persia, and Egypt comes the same lament—pressure of medical work with depleted staff has prevented evangelism. The diversion of medical men and women to government work on the North-West Frontier of India emphasized the difficulty.

A hopeful outlook

In Persia influenza has followed the desolation caused by famine, and relief from actual hunger has been hindered by appallingly high prices. The political phase of friendship with Britain has been favourable to missionary work, and the influence of the mullahs is said to be at a discount. Bishop Linton is preparing with wide and thoughtful outlook for advance, especially in the direction of education, which is greatly needed to supply men and women who will be fit to lead in the new life of the Persian empire.

In Egypt the disturbances from March to May of last year caused less stoppage of missionary work than might have been feared. Though some of the missionaries had for a time to be brought into the protected area in Cairo, others were allowed to remain at the out-stations where they worked, and it is believed to be largely owing to their influence that quiet and good feeling between Moslem and Christian prevailed. There are indications that the participation of eastern Christians in the national movement was owing to their dread if they held back of troubles worse than those which had overtaken them before. The work of Christian literature, of which Cairo is a great centre, is being actively set forward, and Canon Gairdner is now carrying on, in co-operation with other societies, his paper, "Orient and Occident," founded fifteen years ago by Douglas Thornton.

In Palestine the work of missionaries during the past year, at first mainly connected with that of the Syria and Palestine Relief Fund, has gradually been restored to its normal missionary basis. Hospitals and schools, ruined by Turkish occupation, have been rebuilt and set in order, and village schools reopened. A most promising high school for girls has been opened in Jerusalem, with Miss Warburton as principal, under combined missionary auspices, and a proposal is on foot to reopen the English College also as a union institution.

The C.M.S. has been led to withdraw from Turkish Arabia. The Committee thank God for the zeal and high courage of those who since 1883 have been faithful witnesses in a difficult sphere, and also pray for His blessing on the future of this land.

India

The past year will be memorable in the annals of Indian history. The promise of largely increased powers of self-rule, made by the British Government in 1918, has been redeemed. The King's proclamation of a new Constitution is the recognition of a new status for India. It will also prepare the way for greater things to come, for the exercise of responsibility is a potent factor in all human progress.

Peace has not, however, been the immediate effect. The spirit of unrest as evidenced by the grave events in Amritsar in March, 1919, has by no means been allayed. It seems rather to have grown worse, for many missionaries writing at the end of the year speak of the still further widening of the gulf between India and the Mother Country. The anti-British feeling, unfortunately increasing in the political arena, is reflected in the Church itself. A missionary speaking of the disturbances in the Punjab says that they "undoubtedly greatly contributed to widen the gulf between the races, and as such had a very real effect on missionary work"; while another writes: "The majority of villagers always say and think that we are government servants sent and paid by Government. This does us real harm to-day when respect for the Government has changed into open hostility."

A widening gulf

Evidence accumulates that the progress of the Church in the near future promises to be difficult. Rao Bahadur Venkataramiah, district judge of Nellore, says: "What the future holds for us no one can tell, but of one thing we should be reasonably certain: that in the immediate future Christians, Christian institutions, and Christian effort must be prepared for hatred, opposition, and persecution."

In spite of this we find much that is encouraging. The force of the mass movement among the outcastes is in no way abated. At one place, which six years ago was "the hardest spot in the district," we hear of 300 inquirers. At another all the Chamars are under instruction. In Western India the Mangs are coming in by their thousands, while a real movement is in progress among the neighbouring Mahars, another class of village servants.

And the vision of Christ as seen in these humble folk is not without its effect on the caste people. In Western India for example a spirit of inquiry is abroad among the Kunbies, the cultivating class of yeomen farmers, the great Mahratta section of the population who own most of the land. Mr. Butlin tells of finding a broken idol in one of their villages. "Yes," said one of the Kunbies, "we do not worship it any longer. We shall not mend the idol because we do not believe in it." There is no question that the person of Christ has an increasing magnetism for higher-caste Indians. These men are far from acknowledging Him as Saviour and Lord, but, as Mr. K. T. Paul says: "India proper is shot through and through with the Spirit of Christ."

This new spirit is evidenced and fostered in many parts of India

Social service

by different forms of social service, especially among the young. The Rev. S. K. Tarafdar, of Bhagalpur, tells of splendid aid rendered by the high school social service league in a grievous famine. Christian and Hindu students alike threw themselves into the work; 73,610 people were relieved at the poor house, and 3176 admitted; the boys helped the Government by selling rice at a reduced rate to the very poor, by running a shop in the school compound, and by picking up starving people from the roadside and carrying them to the poor house. The spirit of social service is being deepened by the formation of troops of scouts and girl guides in many parts of India, and may well be destined to play a large part in winning India for Christ, for it both creates the public spirit essential to the rich life of nation or Church, and is in itself a preparation for the Gospel.

Christian education

Still more encouraging is the testimony to the value of Christian education to India, provided in the Report of the Calcutta University Commission of which Sir Michael Sadler was chairman. The Commissioners say: "The influence which has been exercised by the missionary colleges upon the development of education in Bengal has been of the highest value and importance. . . . The value of the contribution made by the missionary teachers to the life of the university can scarcely be over-estimated." Testimony of a similar nature abounds in the five volumes of the Report.

One event is worthy of special note, the informal conference between prominent Indian Christians and British missionaries, held at Allahabad. The findings suggested that some society should hand over complete control of its work in a large area to a commission composed entirely of Indians, and that any Europeans working there should be chosen by the commission and work under its direction. The immediate sequel was unexpected, for when the matter was discussed at the Lucknow diocesan conference, the Indians present voted unanimously in favour of a commission equally divided as to the European and Indian elements.

Both the findings of the conference and the sequel are important, for they seem to indicate the true path of advance. With unhurrying speed the Church of Christ in India must be made an Indian Church. There must be speed, and faith is needed for this. Bishop Azariah's words are timely: "Believe in men—Believe in the Holy Ghost." But the speed must be unhurrying. Faith is needed in this also. Nothing would be more disastrous than premature withdrawal. Mr. K. T. Paul, during his recent visit to England, voiced the bulk of Indian Christians when he said: "The East needs the West and the West needs the East." Ultimately Indians must work out their own salvation, but we must be ready to share with them our own rich experience.

The year under review reveals two directions in which such united effort has moved. One is the attempt to discover the best type of education for village Christians. A commission, under the chairmanship of the Rev. A. G. Fraser, has visited the chief centres of mass movement work throughout the whole of India. What is needed is education which will raise the community life of the villagers to a new level. The other outstanding event is a strong move to combine the Christian forces in South India in a united Church. The Anglican Church, the Mar Thoma section of the Syrian Church, and the South India United Church are the parties concerned, and on the basis of the "Lambeth Quadrilateral" much headway has been made. The full fruition of these negotiations depends largely upon the deliberations of the Lambeth Conference in July, and much prayer should ascend to the Heavenly Father that His will may be revealed clearly and followed unflinchingly.

Movement towards union

The influence which the Far East is bound to have on the whole human race gains increasing recognition. It is with some anxiety therefore that we ask how Christianity makes headway in Japan, for Japan is in the van of the movement towards a new order in the Far East. Last year missionaries emphasized the growing materialism due to the increased wealth of the few and the grinding poverty of the many. This year the emphasis has changed to the nation-wide rising of the labouring classes. One writer says :—

Japan

> One of the most remarkable developments in this land, so noted for forward movements, is that of the awakening consciousness of the industrial workers. Strikes have occurred from one end of the empire to the other, and for the most part have been successful. Great meetings have been held and a labour party formed, with some of the best men of the country devoting themselves to its leadership.

The writer sees in this movement a great opportunity for the Church of Christ, but it is an opportunity as yet unredeemed.

The progress of the Church is barred by unequalled high prices. Prominence is given to this in the report from the Central Mission : "The financial problem seems to take precedence of every other." One missionary is quoted as saying : "Although God's work does not depend on money, yet without it our opportunities seem greatly curtailed" ; while another writes : "The younger men are leaving us to seek more remunerative employment. . . ." That factors other than finance are present in the resignations is recognized by yet a third missionary, who, after speaking of the way men are "revaluing their values" all over the world, continues : "We can hardly be surprised that some of the younger men when they come to an honest stock-taking find that they cannot face the financial, intellectual, and spiritual demands of the life before them."

In spite of these difficulties, many missionaries gratefully record encouraging signs. We cull the following from their letters :—

Encouragements

(1) There are not wanting evidences that thoughtful Japanese are seeking something to check the tendency of the time towards materialism, unrest, and immorality. Through the work of the Church in Japan, many have been brought into touch with Christ, and have found Him to be the solution of their problems.

(2) Employers feel keenly the need of Christian character, and are only too glad to give any one with a message a chance of talking to the men.

(3) The Poole Girls' School in regard to numbers has had one of the most prosperous years of its existence; the present fifth-year girls are mostly strong, earnest Christians who have had a splendid influence all through the school.

(4) In the spring the Mayor (of Osaka) gave a most cordial welcome and unexpected proof that the work of the missionaries was appreciated by inviting to dinner all those who had worked for over twenty years in the city, and after thanking them in a graceful speech presented them each with a permanent tramway pass on the city lines. Of the nine who received this honour, three were C.M.S., the Misses Boulton, Tristram, and Howard, with ninety-three years' work between them.

The newspaper evangelism, conducted by the Rev. W. H. Murray Walton in Hiroshima county, is already bearing fruit. Upwards of 300 applications for information about Christianity have been received as a result of the insertion of articles in the newspapers. Over ninety cities, towns, and villages have produced inquirers, the majority being from the remoter country parts, at present unreached by Christian work of any sort. Among the most interesting inquirers are the deputy-mayor of a town, the lay head of the Buddhist Sunday schools in a large city, and the head master of a school.

But the situation is perhaps focussed in the words of the Rev. J. C. Mann: "No one talks of defeat, but it is pretty grim trench warfare in which we hold on. . . ."

China

The change from the old order to the new is proving a painful process in China. Government troops, revolutionary troops, and bandits make settled life impossible. In many parts the activities of the bandits reached their climax in the early part of the year. Since then disturbances have been due less to rival factions within the State than to a deep stirring of national feeling through Japan's retention of Shantung. A new public spirit has been born in China, but even now she is not at unity with herself, and bribery and corruption are the order of the day.

There are signs that in this time of national upheaval and outward stress men are wistfully turning to our Lord; but definite disciples are few. The statement from Western China that "there is little to tell of additions to church membership at this station. . . . Many hear and willingly, but few see their need for Christ or desire salvation from sins," is repeated from every part of the country. The day of a Christian mass movement has yet to come.

The handing over of Shantung to Japan by the Great Powers at the Peace Conference has rendered the work of foreign missionaries more difficult. Bishop Molony, after speaking of the languid condition of the Church in Chekiang and of the falling off in both adult baptisms and confirmations during last year, says :—

> The Chinese clergyman's position is not now nearly so easy as it was fifteen years ago when the prestige of all foreign institutions stood high : now his connexion with the English Church must probably be a trial to him, for throughout China England is regarded as the ally of Japan and her upholder in the Peace Conference over the Shantung question. . . . The present political situation is certainly against us as an English mission and has something to do with the languid condition of the work. We must just work on through it and seek greater spiritual power.

The same cause has also definitely marred much of our work in the mission schools, for no class has shown itself so sensitive to outraged national feelings as the students. Their resentment has found expression in a series of school strikes with the object of enforcing a boycott of Japanese goods and of bringing pressure to bear on the Government. Mission schools have been involved and some have been closed down for months. The missionaries who most admire the disinterestedness of the students' action, cannot but fear the evil effects of indiscipline and the uprooting of the reverence for elders, so deeply seated in the Chinese character.

Students' strikes

Another aspect of the situation must not, however, be lost sight of. Some of the leaders of Chinese thought are actively speaking for Christ, notably Mr. C. T. Wang, late secretary of the Chinese Peace Delegation in Paris, and son of a former C.M.S. pastor. Since his return from Paris he has been giving many stirring addresses to his fellow-countrymen, speaking in no uncertain voice as to China's deep need of the redeeming power of Christ.

God's way of going forward is not yet revealed, but it may be through increasing the responsibility of the indigenous Church. Bishop Molony gives an interesting account of the work of the Chekiang diocesan board. It is composed of five clergymen and five laymen, and with the exception of the Bishop himself and Archdeacon Moule all are Chinese. This board reviews the work of the church councils, appoints their chairmen, is the medium through which the C.M.S. grants pass to the councils, approves all ordination candidates before recognition by the Bishop, and generally advises him. Bishop Molony speaks in the warmest terms of its work. His kindly words of the first Chinese bishop are also not without significance : " Wherever Bishop Sing goes, his help and advice are welcomed both by Chinese workers and by the missionaries." Also several missionaries testify to a new and deepened zeal on the part of the Chinese as to the missionary side of the Church's work. One sign of this is to be found in a new movement started in the last days of the year—" The China for Christ Movement." It is the outcome of a strong conviction that the efforts of the Christian forces will be more fruitful if they can be co-ordinated in a united programme. The hope is increased because the leaders have clearly recognized the sound principle that it is better to strengthen existing local work rather than to start something new. European and Chinese will work side by side, and the general secretary is Dr. C. Y. Cheng.

These facts in themselves may be small, but they make one hope that China is on her way to the promised land.

The Home Base

As concerns the home base the past year gives cause for profound thanksgiving and inspiration.

Quite early in the year the Committee became conscious of the nature of the crisis, though its full gravity did not reveal itself until later. The discussion at the June Home and Foreign Committee, at which more than 200 members were present from all over England, revealed the spirit in which it was to be met. They urged that the next twelve months should be a time of special instruction and prayer, the facts of the situation being placed constantly before Christian people. By the October Committee it had become clear that unless something drastic happened some Missions would have to be closed down. It would be idle to deny that the financial difficulty loomed large in the minds of the Committee, but the real crisis was seen to be a spiritual one. Greater than the need of money was the need of a new realization of God's presence and power. To the leaders the "Red Sea" of financial stringency soon lost the gloomy aspect of calamity. It was recognized as the divine means by which the Church at home, if she would but stand still and exercise faith, would witness the salvation of the Lord.

This spirit was strikingly manifest at a congress of C.M.S. workers held in Sheffield in November. Over 500 delegates from eleven dioceses in the North of England were present. They heard the divine voice calling the Church to consecrate herself afresh to the evangelization of the world. They heard the challenge to every member of the C.M.S. to rise to new levels of devotion. They soberly pledged themselves to lead the way, and this pledge has been already widely fulfilled.

A similar spirit was evinced among the London supporters of the C.M.S. The Queen's Hall was too small for those who foregathered to consider the situation, and the overflow more than filled the church of All Souls, Langham Place, hard by. At both these gatherings the determination to raise more money found a place, but finance was seen in its true perspective in the divine economy. Without it, advance was impossible, and therefore the permanent income must at least be doubled. But only as increased gifts were the expression of increased devotion to our Lord would they lead to a full enrichment of the human race. The experience of Sheffield and London has been repeated in parish after parish both in village and town.

Questions of policy

The crisis has led to much waiting upon God and hard thinking. With a new insistence men are asking of the C.M.S. if it is using their gifts to the best advantage. Is there too much dissipation of forces? Are we not over-slow in handing over control to native Christians? Are we persistent enough in our efforts to establish strong, indigenous Churches? Are we sufficiently alive to the importance of making the social life of tribes and nations Christian in its fullness? These questions of high policy are being put by the rank and file of our supporters. And it was to face these questions afresh and find answers, as well as to deal with the emergency, that a Review Committee was appointed in November, by which much valuable work has already been accomplished. But apart from the immediate answers, the increased number of questions being asked gives ground for hope, for they betoken new interest and must call forth more earnest prayer. The Committee thankfully recognize how much the changed outlook at home has been due to the vision and toil of the Rev. C. R. Duppuy, who has now resigned the home secretaryship for a position in the foreign field. To the vacant home secretaryship the Committee have appointed the Rev. H. St. B. Holland; and the Rev. E. F. E. Wigram, since 1915 in charge of the India and Ceylon Missions, has been appointed a secretary of the Society. In accordance with Law XXI, their names are hereby submitted to the approbation of this meeting.

Among the other events of the year must be mentioned the formation of a C.M.S. council for the North of England and the appointment of a secretary for the Province of York; and the removal by death of our late revered President, Sir John Kennaway, and of our beloved Treasurer, Sir. T. F. Victor Buxton, who was taken from us in the prime of life as the result of a motor accident. This meeting is asked to elect as his successor Mr. S. H. Gladstone, chairman of the Finance Committee since 1908.

Finance

The gross total receipts for the year have reached the figure of £668,555, one far in advance of all previous records. We thank God for this result, which not only delivers us from the dread of immediately closing large sections of work, but enables us to commence the year with a surplus.

The total amount credited to the Peace Thankoffering, including gifts from the previous year, is £143,068 (doubtless much of the increased general income is due to the Thankoffering appeal). Of this total the Committee have taken £120,000 into income. The total available income for the year is £630,089, to which must be added £19,404 loaned to the Medical Mission Auxiliary; and the expenditure £562,078. The accumulated deficit of £81,544 has been completely wiped out, and a surplus of £5871 remains. Together with this surplus on the General Fund the Society carries forward into next year's accounts £23,068 of the Thankoffering

Fund (partly appropriated to special objects), and the deficiency of £19,404 on the fund of the Medical Mission Auxiliary.

Candidates

Plans for the preliminary training of men candidates in St. Andrew's Hostel had to be modified at the eleventh hour, owing to the failure to obtain a warden for the hostel. Fifteen men were in training during the year from 1 May, 1919, to 30 April, 1920. Of these seven were at the Ordination Test School, Knutsford, three at St. John's Hall, Highbury, and five at St. John's College, Durham. Fifty-four women were in training during the year—forty-one at Kennaway Hall and thirteen at the new hostel in Maresfield Gardens, provided temporarily to meet the need for accommodation.

During the year 549 inquiries and offers of service were received from 195 men and 354 women. Out of these offers, seventy-four men and 111 women were brought to the Candidates Committees, and finally of these eleven men and fifty-one women were accepted for training, and thirty-four men and thirty-one women for missionary service. Of the remainder, many were formally refused by the Committee on the adverse report of the Medical Board. Besides these, six missionaries (one man and five women) were accepted by the Colonial Associations.

Conclusion

In conclusion, the thoughts of the Committee once more revert to the extreme gravity of the world situation. It must not be minimized. This is no time for facile optimism. Issues momentous to the whole human race are at stake. If the great movement towards a world-wide brotherhood be stayed, we are faced with world-wide disaster. This can only be averted by an advance in righteousness which shall no longer be merely sectional or national. The ideals of the Kingdom of God can only be fully realized when the whole race moves together in the same direction; for it is true of nations, as of individuals, that we are members one of another.

Reactionary forces and many forms of difficulty—"the enemy" behind and the "Red Sea" in front—are sending us in humility to God. Therein lies our new confidence. We recognize afresh that our progress depends on our stepping forward courageously in a new spirit of adventure for Christ and in Christ. A new vision of our true King, the crucified and risen Conqueror, we must have. A new spirit of brotherhood is drawing together all Christian forces at home and abroad. God, Who has led us so wonderfully in the years gone by, and blessed us so signally in the year just past, has provided for us all that is needed, not only to pass through the difficulties immediately before us, but for all the way that lies beyond. May He give us heart of grace to "go forward" with new devotion and consecration, that we may carry to the world the universal redemption of Christ, and help forward the coming of the Kingdom of God.

Introduction

THE birth pangs of a new world have not yet subsided, and they are evident in the survey of the Church Missionary Society's Missions scarcely less than in that of world history. Indeed it is less possible than ever to separate the secular and the spiritual movements of the world in their mutual reaction. Missionary work necessarily touches both, though it bases upon the spiritual.

In the world of nations we see everywhere the unrest, more or less acute, which comes from a reaching out after self-realization, summed up in the formula of self-determination. In the Christian sphere the missionary seeks to realize the value of each human soul and life, to make the personality what God would have it, so that all its gifts and graces may be embodied in full force and harmony in the Church which represents His Kingdom. The working out of this accepted principle into sound and true practice is not accomplished without much of struggle and sometimes of friction. We see this in the development of the Christian Church and the attitude of non-Christians to our message, alike in Central Africa, in Egypt, in India, and in China.

Spiritual aspirations

This spiritual reaching out after independent and fully personal life pervades the whole world of nationality. Everywhere men are seeking to satisfy the craving and demand of the national spirit, and to perpetuate the inherited ideals that express it. As in politics, so in the spiritual realm, leaders are being compelled to face issues which hitherto had been postponed to a more convenient season when maturity and environment should be better fitted one to another. Questions as to the relation of the foreign mission to the thing for which it exists, namely, the birth and life of an indigenous Church, inexorably demand practical answers, and are receiving them in East and West. In Tinnevelly and North-West Canada, in Sierra Leone and in Mauritius, we see the Church, in her diocesan organization, taking up the burden hitherto borne by the societies, and preparing to shoulder it. We see, too, evidences of indigenous forces, both for evangelization and for the up-building of the Church, maturing from time to time. The Indian sadhu evangelist, Sundar Singh, is, we may hope, the forerunner of many another purely native evangelist, and the first Indian bishop has been followed by the first Chinese bishop.

The vitality of missionary work, as well as of the general life of the world, has been lowered by the waste of war. Close upon the heels of the Armistice followed the terrible world-wide outbreak of influenza, the repercussion of which is evident in all our missionary reports, but chiefly in India. The decrease of population by disease has not prevented the prevalence of scarcity and hunger among those who remain, nor an exorbitant rise of prices, measured by a devalued currency in all parts of the world. The missionary and the native agent alike have been hard put to it to feed and clothe themselves sufficiently, and while prices have risen the amount of local money realized by remittances from home has fallen no less sharply through rise in exchange. It is a sore and battered humanity that the message of the Gospel has had to deal with, and without relief of the hungry and diseased the missionaries' preaching would have been of little effect. The widespread work of the Mission to Lepers, which has just celebrated its jubilee, reminds us that the healing power of the Son of Man is still drawing hopeless sufferers to Him as when He was on earth.

Financial trials

For meeting the difficulties and shouldering the burdens of the year the missionary forces have been at a minimum. Long-deferred furloughs have unavoidably occasioned a rush home of workers whose places could not as yet be filled by new forces. In some cases the native staffs have been reduced through resignation owing to the increased cost of living. One feels the note of war-weariness throughout the letters of the missionaries. While England is accepting a mandate for Mesopotamia, the C.M.S. has had to make arrangements, through lack of staff, to evacuate that country. In view of the enormous increase of cost, other Missions have been seriously scrutinized as to the possibility of maintaining them. The year 1919 has seen the work in the trough of the wave; but there are signs of recovery both at home and abroad, and certainly the possibilities of advance were never greater than they are now.

War weariness

Africa

In 1804 the Church Missionary Society's first Mission in Africa was founded in what is now the protectorate of Sierra Leone, and its work twelve years later was concentrated upon the settlement of liberated slaves rescued by British cruisers. About 1845 the great explorer missionary, Ludwig Krapf, was writing to the Society, urging the establishment of a similar colony at Mombasa, and a chain of stations right across Africa to link the two, so that "a black bishop and a black clergy may become a necessity in the civilization of Africa." The expansion of C.M.S. Africa Missions along the line of the equator is the fruitage of Dr. Krapf's germinal thought. From Sierra Leone to Eastern Nigeria, from Mombasa to Uganda, they have advanced towards each other. The gap between, in the great Congo basin, is being filled up by other missions, though still with very great intervals, and the Society is called not only to consolidate and advance in the territories that have been allotted to it, but also to co-ordinate its efforts with those of other missions, so as to form a continuous whole.

Krapf's vision

Since the days of Krapf, the Church at large has become much more conscious of this call, as it has realized that the constant inflow of Islam from the North is yearly pushing forward a barrier of social and religious prejudice against the life and teaching of the Gospel. For the first time a complete survey has been made of the tribes and sub-tribes of Central Africa on the advance line of Islam. Mr. W. J. W. Roome, agent of the British and Foreign Bible Society, has traversed the country from east to west, and has drawn up a remarkable map, showing the distribution and the extent of the Moslem advance in hitherto unavailable detail. The number of tribes is bewildering, but the broad facts stand out that in Abyssinia, Uganda (with Kenya and Tanganyika), and Nigeria there are three Christian salients which should support one another, and should serve not as mere bastions of defence, but as bases of active advance, if the Gospel is to do its work in Central Africa.

The menace of Islam

To the problem of this great external pressure are added the internal problems of the Church. First and foremost, purity of family life, with the complicated questions of marriage discipline; then the insurgent forces of nationalism and racialism; the unity of the Church among her own members; the labour questions that confront the missionary; provision for the schools and congregations of the suspended German Missions; the adaptation of education to environment in its effect upon the social organism. Hitherto the missionary has been the educator of Africa, and has shaped its education according to his lights. Now the State and the community are taking it in hand, and to them eventually control must pass, save for the influence exercised by high religious ideals, couched in working forms suited to the time and people. Krapf's vision of a black bishop and black clergy has been more than fulfilled. The slave trade of the Moslem raiders as he knew them has been put down. The slavery to the lower nature, unvanquished in Islam, remains to be overcome, the individual to be won to the love and service of Christ, and the Church to be built up.

SIERRA LEONE MISSION

Founded: 1804. Sphere: Within the colony and protectorate of Sierra Leone, West Africa. Diocese: Sierra Leone. Bishop: John Walmsley. African clergymen: 42. Foreign clergyman: 1. Other foreign missionaries: 5. Christian adherents: 13,867. (For other statistics see pp. xii–xv.) Principal station: Freetown.

IN this, the earliest of the Society's Missions, the era of independent diocesan life is drawing near; the work of the Society is concerned with the institutions which it carries on. In the Annie Walsh School for girls typewriting and shorthand are being added to the list of subjects taught, as the demand for women clerks is beginning to be felt. Parents appreciate the protection afforded to their girls by the training of this school amid the moral dangers of the town. It is realized that only Christian character, such as is there being formed, will enable African girls to stand the test of life, especially as unmarried women workers. Fourah Bay College reports a raising of matriculation standard to meet new requirements of the University of Durham, followed by a fall in percentage of passes; but the moral and spiritual tone of the college remained high. In the boys' grammar school we hear of progress in vigour of mind and body. Races, swimming, and boxing are new accomplishments which help to steel the easy-going African character. Boys are naturally disinclined from the exacting study of mathematics, but an African master throws himself into the subject and the boys are fascinated by it. The appeal is made to them for service as evangelists in the interior instead of the easy life as traders or officials at the coast. Will it be answered?

Educational work

YORUBA MISSION

Founded: 1844. Sphere: Within the Southern Provinces of Nigeria, west of long. 6° E. Diocese: Lagos. Bishop: Frank Melville Jones; assistant bishop: Isaac Oluwole. African clergymen: 58. Foreign clergymen: 9. Other foreign missionaries: 25. Christian adherents: 76,113. (For other statistics see pp. xii–xv.) Principal stations: Lagos, Abeokuta, Ibadan, Oyo, Ode Ondo, Ado Ewi, Owo, and Benin City.

NIGERIA, the greatest colony of our empire, which hitherto has formed the single diocese of Western Equatorial Africa, has at length been divided into two episcopal jurisdictions. The diocese of Western Equatorial Africa now comprises the territory east of the Niger and south of the Binue and some of the territory between long. 6° East and the Niger, together with that lying between the Niger and longitude 6° East as far north as latitude 6°30′; it also included that portion of the Cameroons which has come under British protection and influence. The new diocese of Lagos, as bishop of which Archdeacon F. Melville Jones was consecrated on October 18, embraces not only the Yoruba Country immediately north of Lagos, but also the Northern Provinces with their largely Mohammedan population. In the whole great area certain common features stand out. The supply of raw products, such as palm oil, demanded by the inrush of modern commerce, is mainly in the hands of Africans, many of whom are accumulating considerable wealth, while some even employ European managers and servants. Communication by rail and road is rapidly spreading. Education, under a government department, is making considerable progress, and is no longer exclusively missionary. The administration is, more than elsewhere, carried on through local rulers, and special consideration is given to native customs of land tenure and the like. The same line of policy is answerable for the favour in some cases shown to Mohammedan religion and statecraft in the petty principalities of the North.

A new diocese

Through the death of Mrs. E. Fry, widow of a former missionary, work among women and girls in the Yoruba Country has suffered a severe loss.

The rate of baptisms in town and country in the Yoruba Mission shows some sign of slackening. At Ode Ondo "literally thousands within the last few years have entered into the fold of Christ by baptism, and hundreds if not thousands of these have been confirmed. . . . The rush for baptism had been encouraged, with the result that many have already become backsliders and refuse even to attend divine service on Sundays." The number of applicants has not diminished greatly, but stricter requirements have reduced the number of baptisms. In 1918, 443 adults were baptized; last year only forty-two. Six out of thirty stations have congregations large enough each to support an ordained pastor. Contributions for self-support are encouraging here and elsewhere. At one place £90 was spent on church and other buildings and £75 given to the Parent Committee. Altogether £1500 was contributed for the support of teachers, besides £430 for repairs, and £120 for church expenses. The work of evangelization is spreading northwards, but it is hindered by bogus African ministers who baptize at 3*s.* 6*d.* a head and confirm at 2*s.* 6*d.* At the Bookshop at Lagos great excitement was caused by pencil marks in a Yoruba Bible which were regarded as a divine revelation, but turned out to be a bookbinder's mark. The influence of this great Christian book concern is continually spreading. Not only missionaries, but traders and officials, African and European, from every quarter resort to it. "It may safely be said that there is hardly a town in Nigeria having a postal service which does not look to the C.M.S. bookshop, Lagos, for supplies of stationery and books." The educational work of the grammar school and the girls' seminary is progressing, but the Scripture readers' training institution at Oshogbo had to be left empty. C.M.S. Sunday at Lagos brought in collections amounting to £131. Work among lepers is in evidence at Abeokuta and Ake. The difficulties of marriage discipline are being felt. Nominal Christians find it hard to conform to the ideal of married life after the looseness of pagan and Mohammedan relationships, and sometimes prefer concubinage to a regular marriage, with the result that even communicants have to be brought under discipline. On the other hand, there are evidences of zeal in the propagation of the faith. From Ilesa it is reported that trading enterprise is taking many of the young men to different parts of the country, and that wherever they go in good numbers they do not hide their light under a bushel, but erect a place of worship and invite others to join them, and at such centres many are being taught reading. Christian women go out preaching fortnightly in the streets and compounds, and as a result of their effort some have been baptized. The men are also doing well on the farms. Christian marriage is on the increase. Two short tours through the Ilorin district, and visits to the town itself, revealed the fact that after long years of closed doors the Moslem people welcomed the missionary as a friend and everywhere gave him an attentive hearing. Their belief in and expectation of the return of Christ are assigned as reasons for this. At Owo in one month the people contributed £48 for church purposes and built themselves a new church in one of the villages.

Ode Ondo

NIGER MISSION

Founded: 1857. Sphere: Within the Southern Provinces of Nigeria, east of long. 6° E. Diocese: Western Equatorial Africa. Bishop: Herbert Tugwell; assistant bishop: A. W. Howells. African clergymen: 26. Foreign clergymen: 7. Other foreign missionaries: 21. Christian adherents: 56,437. (For other statistics see pp. xii–xv.) Principal stations: Onitsha, Awka, Ebu, Asaba, Ani Ofu, and, in the Niger Delta, Bonny and Patani.

Appointment of an African assistant bishop

Bishop Tugwell was intending to retire after his long, arduous, and successful episcopate of five-and-twenty years in this trying climate, but the shortness of forces in the Mission moved him to volunteer to extend his services for a while, an offer which the Committee gratefully acknowledged and accepted. An African assistant Bishop has been found for the diocese in the person of the Rev. A. W. Howells, pastor of Christ Church, Lagos, who was educated at Fourah Bay College, Sierra Leone, and is an M.A. of Durham University. Mr. Howells has been secretary to the diocesan synod, and has produced valuable translations.

On all hands ways of work are opening up, but often they cannot be followed. At Onitsha the Bookshop, like that of Lagos, is increasing its work year by year, and use is made of it by outsiders. The books sold are largely educational, and in addition to the Scriptures and Christian books, a good deal of general pure literature is circulated. In view of the spread of education which constantly increases the number of readers, the importance of this work is vital. The superintendent, Mr. J. N. Cheetham, notes widespread complaints against the present system of education, which is regarded as a mere preliminary to business or government appointments for which few of the scholars really become qualified. "There are too many youths wandering about the country in search of work which they are not likely to find." These will be fruitful material for discontent and unrest in the future. Youths trained in the college at Awka are with difficulty attracted to the work of teaching, which they regard as inferior to mercantile or official work. The work of teaching also suffers through the rise of prices. For example, at Onitsha seven schoolmasters resigned owing to the increased cost of living. Mr. Cheetham wishes the Government would strictly limit the number of schools, so as to prevent the increase of an intellectual proletariat. From the Christian point of view he notes that "many of the worst cases of backsliding are to be found among those who have been intelligent scholars." There are signs too of anti-Christian literature in circulation among English-speaking clerks and schoolmasters.

Educational work

Work among English-speaking Africans is carried on at Awka by the Rev. H. Taylor. It is appreciated by the government schoolmasters and clerks who attend. Instances of persecution are still not unknown. In the village of Akokwa the landowners set the school house on fire in hope of turning out the African mission agents, but eventually through negotiations with the chiefs and the district officer matters were settled. Two conventions for the deepening of spiritual life were held at Agulu for Christians generally and for mission preachers specially, and a real stimulus was experienced. The students of the training college who attended the conventions profited greatly by the teaching of Old Testament history and its application to the Christian life in their own surroundings.

Evangelistic work

In the Igabo district 1150 persons were baptized during the year, 4000 were waiting for examination with a view to baptism, and there were sixty-nine Churches organized in as many villages, but the Mission was unable to use the sum of £600 voted for a European house, for the lack of a missionary to occupy it. Backsliding is inevitably common, but among many of the Churches there is "a steady growth in faith and morals, and a decline in the old heathen customs."

The Rev. J. D. Aitken has written a new primer in Igabo and revised the Gospel of St. Mark; some hymns and Morning and Evening Prayer are ready for press. He considers that, "while 12,500 people have joined the Church in this district there is no mass movement going on. It is rather a preaching of the Gospel by those who first heard. Now that a catechism, to be learned verbally, has been introduced and reading and writing are being taught, the attention of the convert has been turned from carrying the message to learning these things, with the result that extension has almost stopped." A demand for the gospels is a more hopeful sign than the rapid spread of Christian profession. There will now be less difficulty in bringing those who have been inquirers for five years up to the standard of baptism. But what is to be done when the Rev. G. T. Basden writes:—

> The C.M.S. has not a single foreign missionary on the western side of the Niger. There are five erstwhile European centres, all with good houses, three of them iron roofed and costing some hundreds of pounds. These are all vacant, left to the rats and vermin.

Work among women

Work among women has made some progress, and at Ebu-Owerri a new training home has been built by co-operation among local Churches. The native church council arranged for a proportionate supply of labour and local materials from each Church. "Many Churches brought in poles and mats for the roofs, bringing them from four to twelve or twenty miles free of cost. Other Churches were appointed to come into the compound and tread mud for the building of the walls." On appointed days Christians came and did a day's work without pay as their contribution.

At Awka Miss Harris reports that the attendance of women at church in different stations varies from one to ninety. The missionaries are working to form Christian public opinion among the women by means of conferences. Two of these were held, one in May, 1919, when 500 attended, the other in November, with 300, and there was an earnest desire to learn more of Christ and the Scriptures. The work of examining women inquirers and catechumens during itinerations is heavy. From thirty to sixty names are often presented to the missionary on arrival at an out-station.

The value set by African Christians on girls' education is shown by the increase in the numbers at Miss M. J. Martin's girls' school at Umudioka. Many of the girls are betrothed to be married, and have been sent there with a view to becoming fitted for domestic life, for Christian men are wanting educated wives. Baptisms of the girls take place from time to time, but occasionally the missionary is saddened by a bad case of immorality. A committee of native women to help in the work of the school has been set on foot.

Pastoral work

The Christians of the Niger Mission generally are well-to-do and liberal. The project of a grammar school for Onitsha as a memorial to the late Archdeacon T. J. Dennis has been warmly taken up and the local contributions actually received amount to £1500. The Rev. H. Proctor, of Patani, through whose widely lamented death the work of the district has greatly suffered, wrote: "We are not receiving any grants from C.M.S. direct, although in several cases we have received money from C.M.S. friends in support of teachers." The local Church year by year is taking over more of the cost of operations.

On the occasion of a recent heathen festival the chief complained that there were no young men to take part in it, because they were all Christians. Yet signs of slackness are also reported. Some of the earlier Churches have lost their keenness and are making very slight progress. The great question of Christian marriage is felt to be the touchstone of discipline and of progress. On the whole there appear to be signs of distinct growth in this respect, though the wide spread of polygamy causes great difficulties. Mr. Proctor wrote: "A great number of marriages have taken place, which is to me one of the best signs of advance we can have, especially when the people are ready to put away their superfluous wives, in several cases renouncing the dowry paid, and marrying one wife in church." Similarly the Rev. O. N. Garrard writes: "The marriage register is a very much better index as to the progress of God's work than is the baptism register."

NORTHERN PROVINCES (NIGERIA) MISSION

Founded: 1865. Sphere: Within the Northern Provinces of Nigeria. Diocese: Lagos. Bishop: Frank Melville Jones; assistant bishop: Isaac Oluwole. African Clergymen: 2. Foreign clergymen: 9. Other foreign missionaries: 9. Christian adherents: 1036. (For other statistics see pp. xii–xv.) Principal stations: Lokoja, Katcha, Bida, Zaria, Panyam, and Kabwir.

THE disproportion between the progress of the work in this Mission and in the Southern Provinces is great; the Christians connected with C.M.S. in the latter number 132,000 but in the Northern Provinces about 1000 only. The reason for this lies partly in the prevalence of Islam among the ruling chiefs of the North (though not so much among the village population), partly in the restrictions on missionary propaganda which have been imposed for this reason, partly in the fact that the popular movement towards education and Christianity has not yet spread in these provinces as it has nearer the coast. By the death of Dr. J. C. Fox at Panyam in August, 1919, the work of the Mission has suffered severely. After escaping from a torpedoed vessel early in the war and serving in the R.A.M.C. he had returned to the Mission, but fell a victim to blackwater fever only a month after arrival.

Death of Dr. J. C. Fox

From Lokoja the Rev. A. Beaghen reports that the European community, to whom, as well as to Africans, he ministers, is slack in attendance at worship. The condition of the African Church is more encouraging; "it gives two-thirds of its total income to sending out the Gospel to the people who sit in the darkness which is to be found very near to Lokoja, to say nothing of that darkness of Mohammedanism which pervades the town itself." The educated Africans, clerks and traders, present an acute problem. Many have fallen into immorality and few are church members. Here, as in the South, assistant masters trained by C.M.S. are drawn away by higher salaries to government and commercial work and it is difficult to get African missionaries. Among the evangelists discontent occurred, and several resigned, but the places of those who left were supplied by voluntary workers.

Zaria

From Zaria Dr. W. R. S. Miller reports that when great scarcity of sugar prevailed during the war a considerable sugar making industry was started at the Christian village of Gimi with the help of the Rev. W. A. Thompson, himself a West Indian, which both supplied a pressing need for sugar and gave a useful industrial opening to a number of Christian young men. The training of evangelists at Bida was retarded by the scourge of influenza, but it has been improved by combining labour with learning. The men "have football two afternoons and manual (road-making) labour four hours a week." Sunday beer-drinking hinders the work among the congregations of the villages. The missionary visits seven "clerks' churches on the railway line" built by Government or Christian traders, the salary of the evangelist being paid by the Nigerian pastorate. Here too, immorality among the isolated Christians is a great stumbling-block, but Christian ministrations are helping them. At Panyam women's work is hampered by the hard labour which they have to do on the farms as well as in their homes, but there were twenty-eight candidates for baptism in the class which was being taught. A number of the school children took a turn at field work in which their elders needed help, so as to let other girls come for a turn in school. The chief of Korang is a keen Christian but is not allowed by Government to open a school in his town. Still evangelistic work is going on, and there are a hundred adherents in the place.

KENYA MISSION

Founded: 1844. Sphere: Within the Kenya Colony. Diocese: Mombasa. Bishop: Richard Stanley Heywood. African clergymen: 8. Foreign clergymen: 18. Other foreign missionaries: 34. Christian adherents: 7734. (For other statistics see pp. xii–xv.) Principal stations: Mombasa, Frere Town, and Rabai on the coast, and Wusi, Mbale, Nairobi, Kabete, Kahuhia, and Weithaga in the interior.

Population

OFFICIAL statistics concerning the population of the British East Africa Protectorate at the end of 1918 give the following figures: Europeans 5570; Indians, 15,407; Arabs, 7468; Goanese, 2020; natives, 2,596,409, of whom nearly 16,000 were in government service. There were more than a million natives in the Nyanza Province, and 706,534 in the Kenia Province. The Masai numbered 41,678.

Kenya "Colony"

The British East Africa Protectorate has now become a Crown Colony, under the style of "Kenya Colony," with representative, but not responsible government. The new Legislative Council consists of eleven selected members of the European community, two native members representing the Indian population, one representing the Arabs, and a number of official members nominated by the Governor.

Changing conditions

The Report of the Mission shows that conditions of work in Kenya are rapidly changing. As elsewhere, the return of Christians employed in the Labour Corps has had no little effect in opening the minds of the people to a knowledge of western conditions and a desire for the advantages of civilization as seen by them. The opening up of the country to colonization and industry is producing a demand for land and labour, and there is a danger of exploitation of the African by the European speculator or industrialist. Already there are signs of apprehension among the natives of the highlands caused by conduct of this kind, and the legislature and administration of the colony will need all the influences in favour of justice and sympathy that can be brought to bear on them. The path of education is opening more widely than missionary forces are able to use it. Yet it is most vital that the school-going population should be instructed by teachers who have a real religious faith. The Indian element of the population, now represented on the Legislative Council, may not improbably be largely reinforced from India in the near future, seeing that India needs an outlet for her surplus population and that her people are well suited to the physical conditions of life in these lands, and missionary policy will have to take more account of it. It is satisfactory to know that the 2000 Christians who composed the Mission Labour Corps did best of all the East Africans who went to the war. Government are so desirous to make use of Christian agency in education that even untrained Christian teachers are being sent to open schools at out-stations, and Government are actually willing to put the work of education into the hands of the missionary body, provided it can find the necessary staff. Any such arrangement, were it possible, would have to be upon a co-operative basis as between the different societies. In dealings with Government much benefit has already been received through the Alliance between missions set on foot at Kikuyu, which is able to speak for the missionary body with a united voice.

The operations of the Mission fall into three groups: the coastal, near to Mombasa and Frere Town; the central Missions in and about the capital, Nairobi; and the outlying stations about Fort Hall.

Three classes of Africans

The Report of the Mission indicates that it has practically to do with three classes of Africans: first, those whom it calls sophisticated, living in close touch with western civilization, as at Nairobi and Mombasa; next the semi-sophisticated who are on native reserves at Weithaga and other stations in that region; and finally the relatively unsophisticated, on more remote native reserves. Generally speaking the progress of missionary work is greater where contact with western life is more close, but at the same time the difficulties which attend that contact are more acutely in evidence. The extent to which western thought has come into the life of the people is illustrated not only by their adoption of dress and other western habits, but by the serious proposals made to abolish Swahili as the common tongue in Kenya and to replace it by English. In a former generation the view was held that the spread of Swahili written in the Arabic character was in favour of the propagation of Islam and the term "Swahili" sometimes occurs as synonymous with "Mohammedan." It may well be that missionary work in Swahili has changed this; but the spread of education, especially through Indian Moslems, will make the modern school to some extent a channel for Moslem propaganda, and further Indian immigration is likely to work in this direction. At the same time, both here and in Uganda the spread of the knowledge of English opens the door not only to Christian teaching but to irreligious and anti-social literature, whether from Europe or India.

Proposal to replace Swahili by English

Frere Town

At Frere Town, as last year, the contact of African Christians with Mohammedan Swahilis is said to be deleterious. In three or four cases unmarried Christian girls have fallen away to Islam. The Rev. H. K. Binns writes that the "educated lads are snapped up by Government as fast as they leave school. These mostly go away to different parts of the country. A few have married and taken their wives with them and of these we have as a rule good reports." He urges that children of nominal Christians should not be baptized indiscriminately without a guarantee for a real Christian upbringing. To a neglect of this he attributes the unsatisfactory character of Christians of the second and third generation. The constant fluctuation of population is another great difficulty, as at most centres of the kind. The printing press is busily at work, chiefly for educational purposes. Dr. Shepherd reports that the sales at the bookshop are continually increasing and that more Swahili literature is circulating year by year among the up-country tribes. The divinity school in 1919 passed out two students for the diaconate and five as catechists; two of these are going to work among the Digo tribe six miles south of Mombasa, where a movement towards Christianity has begun. A number of Digo inquirers have migrated from their heathen village and started a settlement of their own, with a little church, already too small for the congregation, and a room for the missionary on his visits. Mr. Paul Jibran has been ordained to the pastorate of Mombasa. Here and elsewhere in the colony Roman Catholic aggression is troublesome. A wealthy Indian Moslem trader has built a school for his fellow religionists, costing £5000, and this is receiving a grant from the Government.

Nairobi

In and around Nairobi evangelistic and pastoral work are growing rapidly. One branch of the latter is being carried on co-operatively, and illustrates the difficulties of the new "civilization." Many lads from the Kikuyu villages go for work of various sorts to the centre, and in some cases take their wives, but a young African woman left alone through the day, though a Christian, at a centre like Nairobi is morally almost defenceless and many sad cases have occurred. In order to cope with this difficulty a Christian Refuge Institution has, none too soon, been started by the Alliance of Protestant Missions. A second service had to be started in the school for the overflow from the church services. This has become as large as, if not larger than, the church congregation and continues to grow. The attendance at instruction classes numbers from 900 to 1000, but the members are not always regular and the work of home visitation is difficult. One of the pressing problems is how to retain for mission work the most promising boys who are being eagerly sought by government, trade, and planting interests, which offer wages far beyond what the missionary can give. Evangelistic work has been begun in the military lines at Nairobi at the request of officers, notwithstanding Mohammedan opposition. At Nakuru the work is carried on without expense to the Society, as the young Christians meet all expenses. It is however necessary to follow them up in the various camps along the Uganda Railway. Evangelism among the surrounding Akikuyu and Wakavirondo continues to go forward rapidly, and out-stations are growing up.

Weithaga

Weithaga is a centre through which many Kikuyu and Kavirondo people pass on the way to Nairobi, offering constant opportunity for evangelistic work. Many of them have already been touched by Christianity and some have become readers; these are very friendly and lead others on. Generally speaking the planters are kindly disposed towards the African population, and more especially towards Christians, and are ready to help them in providing for their worship and their teachers; they also give them better food and houses. The Roman Catholics, seeing the importance of this work, are setting apart men to visit the estates and are getting their own teachers installed by promising employers a supply of labour. It would be possible to open evangelistic schools in many places in this district were it not that the Government insist upon regular European supervision. A stone church in Weithaga over 100 feet long was built free of all expense to the Society; £60 was collected in money and the material brought to the site free of expense. Already it is beginning to be too small. The women's work has grown both among inquirers and catechumens and in the Sunday schools. The little communities of Christians round Weithaga are increasing, as converts tend to separate from their pagan neighbours and to build new places near to other Christians. The difficulty is to keep up the standard of Christian teaching.

Kahuhia

At Kahuhia the schools had in December, 1918, 360 scholars; in March, 1919, 461; in December, 615. The monthly attendance of out-patients in the dispensary was 741. Thirty-six adults were baptized and forty-one confirmed. It is felt that pastoral needs are becoming more urgent, especially the training of teachers who can carry the work beyond the rudimentary stage for which the earliest helpers were sufficient. Though the influenza of November, 1918, ravaged the district cruelly, yet the Rev. H. D. Hooper is able to write that "everywhere signs of recovery are evident." War-time restrictions by the Government on out-school work have been removed. Good harvests have restored the energy and natural eagerness of the people, and the comity of missions has proved of material advantage in securing their interests. The experience of the Rev. J. Comely, of Embu, is rather more chequered: "The school church which holds about 500 is likely soon to overflow, but out-school work is being held up and there are fluctuations among those who come forward as inquirers." The Rev. H. J. E.

Muitira

Butcher, Muitira, reports unlimited opportunities for missionary work while he was chaplain at Dar-es-Salaam, where from 10,000 to 15,000 Africans of many tribes were congregated till demobilization took place. The work at his station he finds in its beginnings.

TANGANYIKA MISSION

Founded: 1876 Sphere: Within the mandate-territory of Tanganyika. Diocese: Mombasa. Bishop: Richard Stanley Heywood. Foreign clergymen: 7. Other foreign missionaries: 15. Christian adherents: 3518. (For other statistics see pp. xii–xv.) Principal stations: Mamboya, Berega, Kongwa, Mvumi, Dodoma, and Buigiri.

THE Colonial Office announces that the territory which has been known as German East Africa is provisionally renamed the "Tanganyika Territory."

In this recently revived Mission the year 1919 has been one of reconstruction carried out under great difficulties—partly on account of the small staff, partly because of pestilence and famine, though these were less severe than in 1918. The return of missionaries in the course of the year has rendered it possible to take up most, if not all of the previous work, though there is little prospect of the C.M.S. staff being able to do anything towards supplying the needs of territory evacuated by German missionaries.

Missionary work at a standstill

Owing to the devastations of war, followed by disease and hunger, the returning missionaries found the people in the very lowest depths of despair, indolence, and destitution, and all mission work was practically at a standstill. Vast numbers were still dying of hunger and exposure. Teachers who had escaped or been released in many cases returned to find their homes destitute, their property gone, and their families wandering in search of food. Government authorities gave what help was possible, and gradually more tolerable conditions were restored. It is not surprising that some teachers were found slack in work, no instruction classes being held and attendance in school and church being poor. In addition to this, Islam has been advancing in the southern part of the Berega district. Moslem emissaries spread a rumour that the British Government were favouring Islam and would not recognize the Christian faith any more. Many scholars had been cajoled into apostasy. Soon, however, the Acting Administrator of the colony took measures to make known to the people the policy of neutrality in all matters of religion pursued by Government, and the false impression was removed with favourable results to the work. "Many," the Rev. D. Deekes writes, "have since returned to us; notwithstanding, the position is very grave and we must now go full speed ahead while we have the opportunity."

Islam advancing

Education

The important work of education has been largely revived, though it is not yet up to pre-war conditions. At the end of 1919 the schools numbered 281 against 405 before the war, and scholars 14,000 against 17,000. Here, as in Kenya, Government are heartily encouraging education, and the difficulty will not be that of increasing the number of schools and scholars, but of making the education thoroughly effective and Christian. There were sixty-nine adult baptisms during the year.

Medical work resumed

After being in abeyance for six years, medical work in the Mission has been resumed by Dr. R. Y. Stones, the centre chosen being Dodoma, which lies about twenty miles west of Buigiri.

UGANDA MISSION

Founded: 1876. Sphere: Mainly within the protectorate of Uganda. Diocese: Uganda. Bishop: John Jamieson Willis; suffragan bishop: Herbert Gresford Jones. African clergymen: 66. Foreign clergymen: 35. Other foreign missionaries: 77. Christian adherents: 122,076. (For other statistics see pp. xii–xv.) Principal stations: Kampala, Gayaza, Budo, Entebbe, Mukono, Ndeje, Mityana, Kikoma, Kasaka, and Kako in the province of Buganda; Mbarara and Kabarole in the Western Province; Masindi, Hoima, and Gulu in the Northern Province; Jinja, Iganga, Kamuli, Nabumale, and Ng'ora in the Eastern Province; Maseno, Kisumu, and Butere, in Kavirondo; and Bukoba in Tanganyika.

A STATEMENT prepared in Uganda mentions that heathenism has entirely disappeared from large areas, and that in the central provinces of Buganda itself Islam, which was dominant in 1888, is quite in the minority. But the actual number of Christians is yet small in comparison with the general population. Out of about 4,000,000 people in the protectorate, some 100,000 have been baptized in the C.M.S. Mission, and perhaps as many again by the Roman Catholics, while five districts in the diocese (outside the centre), with an area of 350,000 square miles and a population of three-quarters of a million, are without a resident Protestant missionary. The great task here as elsewhere is to make the Christian Church truly Christian in life as well as in belief, and to purge out the immorality connected with paganism, without weakening those useful social functions and moral conventions, suited to the Bantu race, which the old condition of things provided. In this connexion the most anxious omen is that the census reports show a marked decline in the population each year. In 1917-18 deaths exceeded births by 4000, and in the previous year by 7000. In 1918 only 440 marriages were contracted in the Uganda Church as compared with an average of more than 900 since the Marriage Ordinance was made in 1904. No doubt the absence in 1918 of a large number of marriageable youths on war service must be taken into account, but this does not fully allay anxiety, especially when we are informed that in the Roman Catholic regions and in the west of the country the population has increased. The reports of the medical mission, alas, show only too plainly that venereal disease and alcoholism, coming into the country through war and increased trade, especially with India, are undermining the physical as well as the moral power of the people.

Proportion of Christians to population

The Report of the Mission tells us that there is in Buganda a national movement which is giving many officials "furiously to think." "There is a great increase in the numbers of English-speaking natives, and a certain amount of nationalist literature has been coming in from Egypt and Ceylon. The formation of a Young Baganda Club has been much aided by young men educated abroad, and while we of the Mission do not anticipate trouble in the immediate future, yet a more or less anti-European feeling undoubtedly exists and must influence mission policy to some extent." The return of many young men who had been serving in the war has accelerated this process, and here, as in other lands, together with an unthinking passion for the externals of western civilization in dress, food, dwellings, and communications, there goes an acute sense of nationalism and a desire for "self-determination," not always balanced by an equally strong desire to make oneself capable of the right self-determination. Here it is that the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and His Church, when truly manifesting Him as His Body, provide the needed guidance and power.

A national movement

It has been the wise and far-seeing policy of the leaders of the Uganda Mission from the very first to organize and train the Church on such lines that it may become really fit for self-determination, and the steps towards this in the development of diocesan organization and of financial endowment, side by side with current contributions, crowned by the establishment of a thoroughly organized diocesan synod and a well thought out constitution of the Church, have been told from time to time in the Society's Reports. It would seem however that there is some anxiety on the part of the leaders as to whether the pace may possibly have been too great. Symptoms of impatience of foreign control are seen in the anti-doctor heresy and the demand for the immediate appointment of Africans as rural deans. The mission Report well says, "This desire for self-expression must not be stifled, but guided into safe paths."

Chaplaincy work

Chaplaincy work for the European community is carried on as far as possible at the three centres of Entebbe, Kampala, and Jinja. "The services are really appreciated by a small section." But the missionary has little time to spare for this work, and it is hoped that regular chaplains may soon be provided, as is being done in Kenya.

Discipline

In the matter of discipline "little progress is reported. The Church as a whole has not formed a definite public opinion on moral questions . . . we still have too great a dead weight of nominal Christianity." Here, as nearer the coast, marriage discipline is the pivot of the Church's moral life, and the old bad customs of heathen life are not easily eradicated, even if for a time they are pruned.

Work among women

This emphasizes the ever recurrent insistence on the need for efficient work among women. "There should be two lady missionaries at each of the ruri-decanal centres, and also at the stations worked by the Board of Missions." It is noted that the women of the diocese are far behind the men, and that there is a lack of Christian wives for men converts, especially in newer districts. This has its obvious bearing upon the social welfare of the Church. Owing to ignorance and barbarous customs "infant mortality in Uganda is something like seventy per cent. Moreover, Christian men who marry heathen girls are liable to relapse into paganism. Miss I. M. B. Leakey, of the girls' school at Hoima, in Bunyoro, reports that the teaching of industrial work and indigenous handicrafts requiring only local products as raw material, which can be pursued by girls in their own homes, is likely to be useful. "A certain amount of field work takes the place of giving school fees in the day school." The boarding school is needed to give guidance after the abolition of bad customs until a new Christian opinion and custom can be created. In former days infant or immature girls were promised in marriage to a man who paid a dowry to the parents and claimed his wife when of age; meanwhile it was to the interest of the parents to look after the girl carefully lest, if she went wrong, repayment of the dowry might be claimed. Since this custom has been abolished the parents have become careless about watching over their young girls, and it has become desirable to keep them in a boarding school till they are of marriageable age. Happily Andereya, the Mukama (king), is anxious that the Christian education of girls should be extended in the country, but at present the smaller chiefs are less zealous in the matter.

Education

The work of Christian education is regarded by the Uganda Mission as the best bulwark against the inroads of Islam. Hence the ten boys' high schools and three girls' boarding schools are wisely planned in accordance with a policy of providing a separate high school for each of the important tribes in the diocese. So far there is a fringe of these schools round the north and west, from which quarter Moslem inroads are chiefly likely to come, though it may not be long before the Moslem tide surges round to the south and east. If however the Church makes good use of the armoury of education which is entrusted to her, side by side with a strong spiritual and moral life, there need be no great anxiety as to the advance of Islam.

In September, 1919, the educational system of the Mission made an important advance towards completion when the foundation stone of the Bishop Tucker Memorial College at Mukono was laid. The heads of all the countries in the protectorate were present, and the Governor would have been there but for illness. The visitors were welcomed by Ham Mukasa, the local county chief, who has twice visited England. He recalled Bishop Tucker as a friend of the Baganda and wise counsellor of the Government in its early days, always advising it to make haste slowly. Ham Mukasa compared the college, in which candidates for ordination are trained, to a military depot where soldiers are instructed and kept in readiness for any emergency. Referring to the education of women, he used an illustration. "Once," he said, "a big boat was made, but the men could not get it into the water; they called the boys, who could but move it a little way. It then struck them to call the women, and when they touched the boat it slipped away into the water." The college is intended to carry the theological education of the Baganda clergy to the higher level which is now demanded.

The number of boys in the Budo High School for sons of chiefs has increased to 102 owing to the demobilization of many of the lads who had gone to the war. Not a few had continued in correspondence with their head master, and some had given their lives. Nearly all received promotion in the African Native Medical Corps. At the annual prize-giving a short play picturing "a scene at Mtesa's court when he decided for Christianity as against Islam after being taught by Stanley, was given by the boys in their own vernacular. . . . Our boys have very definitely begun to be chosen to fill important chieftainships. The 'chiefs' in this country are civil administrators; they are not chieftains of savage tribes. One has been appointed county chief and another second chief in another county, and another has been appointed president of the council of chiefs in the country of Busoga; while three others have been promoted." The printing press of the school, worked by paid printers, with assistance from the boys, is in active operation, both teaching them and yielding a profit. "The first old boy to be ordained, Fesito Luboyera, is doing splendid work with a day school of over 300 boys at the capital." The principal writes: "Our old boys need the prayers of those who understand; they are in a hobbledehoy state, reaching out to a nationalist feeling, very keen on national progress, and not yet wise to distinguish between externals and essence." It is interesting to know that the zeal of the boys in the Budo School is provoking their sisters to emulation in helping one another for Christ. The girls of the Gayaza School are trying to win others in the outlying districts. One of them writes:—

> The boys of Budo are much better than we in giving themselves; they do not leave a school unless there is some one to take their place and, it is perfectly true, they have more places than we have to fill in high schools and central schools. There is not one school left to itself in which there was a Budo "old boy," but there are many of ours. Who will come here in Merabu's place? Let her not be afraid, she will come back with me. Is there any one who likes to go back when she was going forward? Arise! Arise! Look, the house we were building is falling! No one will like to sleep out of doors. Let us get up, and hold up the pillars of the house which we are building.

Industrial work

The work of industrial education at several stations is prospering, and has been helped by the success of the school at Kako in making furniture and fittings for the new cathedral. The Rev. H. Mathers writes: "What the boys produced was in great demand, especially by the government officials, who spread a good report of our work; in consequence the workshop was usually stocked with orders. The workshop always interested visitors, none more so than the Governor. The choir stalls in Namirembe Cathedral were made there. It has always been my plan to get in Christian boys—communicants if possible—for training in useful handicrafts. Although the apprenticeship for the carpentry is a stiff year's course, with Rs 10 entrance fee, the applications were in excess of the accommodation; and it had this advantage among others, that it saved C.M.S. expenses. Our industrial school is self-supporting. I need hardly say that the moral training and life of the boys are carefully watched and fostered. To meet the need of the Church and its educated youth considerable extension is needed. The more this can be done by the Africans who have been trained, the better. This may help to solve the question of expense which remains considerable, even in industrial education, where the trained product, as soon as it becomes economically valuable, passes out to supply the needs of the community."

Medical work

Another most important branch of training is the medical school at the Mengo hospital. This has been going since 1917, and is carried on as a national institution though it is under the control and direction of a C.M.S. missionary, Dr. A. R. Cook. After a visit by the Governor and Lady Coryndon, together with a number of officials, a maintenance grant of £50 per annum was made by Government, besides scholarships of £10 and £15 for three years. The native Government also grant two scholarships. As the Government wish to replace the Indians now employed by trained Baganda, and as the Mission needs good Christian medical helpers who will do evangelistic work at the centre and in the provinces, the scope for the students trained at Mengo is wide. The maternity training school completed its first year's curriculum. Six Baganda girls were presented for examination, and all passed and have since been located in pairs at three different centres in Uganda to carry on their midwifery and infant welfare work. A sale, organized by Lady Coryndon, raised £1000 in aid of the new buildings required by the maternity training school, an amount which has been supplemented by £500 contributed locally. The Indian element in Uganda is by no means negligible, and still less is it unfriendly. Dr. L. E. S. Sharp writes that at Toro a new Indian block of the hospital had been built and completed with local Indian subscriptions amounting to about £120. This sum provides a building, with accommodation for two Indian families, and outbuildings and flower garden. From Butere, in Kavirondo, Archdeacon Owen writes that with fees, mostly paid by Indian traders, he has been able to keep up a good stock of drugs and build a new dispensary and two small wards for men and women.

Literature and script

Mr. W. E. Hoyle, manager of the bookshop at Kampala (since taken over by the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge), reports that, with the spread of education there is an increasing demand for literature, and that the sales of 1919 were a record. Bibles and portions sold numbered nearly 30,000. The S.P.C.K. has continued to supply Prayer Books, Bible commentaries, and many other publications. The native bookshop in Namirembe market is flourishing and three similar bookshops in charge of Baganda managers have been established at out-stations. The question of script was to a great extent solved for the Luganda language by Pilkington, who was a phonetician as well as a linguist. Archdeacon Kitching of Jinja, reviewing translation work in other languages of the diocese, writes: "Is it too utopian to hope that some day we may have a uniform alphabet for all our African Missions, so that recruits may be able to learn that alphabet on recognized lines before sailing, secure in the confidence that, to whatever part of the field they may be sent, they will be able immediately to read the literature aloud, even without comprehending a single word of the meaning? A vast amount of time and effort would thus be saved; the longer a movement for the attainment of this object is delayed the greater the difficulty of unifying the spelling in the different districts. There would also be a great saving of expense in the avoidance of duplicate literature in closely allied dialects." The same need is being felt in China, Japan, and India. The question of one language for the schools among the various tribes of East Africa is exercising the minds of some missionaries. Miss Chadwick, writing from Butere, regards compulsory English as impossible, but urges that Swahili should be vigorously pushed. Archdeacon Owen from the same quarter is of the same opinion. Evidently, if the adoption of a common language for education were decided on, it could only be gradually carried out from the centre to the circumference.

The new cathedral

The greatest diocesan event of last year was the opening in September of the new cathedral on Namirembe Hill, and the gathering of leading Christians from all parts for that ceremony and for the synod. Four kings and a president took part in the consecration and celebrations. Enormous crowds assembled in and around the building; the European police officers estimated the numbers at not less than 20,000 outside, in addition to 3000 or 4000 in the building, and a very large offering was made. In order to assure the completion in due time, many schoolboys and girls took a share in carrying earth to level the floor of the new building. On the following Sunday there were 864 communicants. The Rev. J. Roscoe, a C.M.S. missionary in Uganda for twenty-five years (1884-1909), and delegate of the Archbishop of Canterbury for the consecration ceremony, in a recent letter writes about the structure: "As to the building itself, it is a wonderful work, for it combines the efforts of Christians from all parts of the world—British, American, Indian, and African. In the Uganda Diocese there is the combination of Buganda, Bunyoro, Ankole, and Toro races, which nothing but the grace of God could bring together in one house—peoples who never met in the past except on the battlefield. The materials of the building are largely native products; the bricks and tiles have been manufactured in the country, and the stone hewn from the rocks and fashioned on the spot, while timber has been cut from the forests and worked up into the beautiful designs seen in the completed structure. Another cause of rejoicing is that most of the work has been done by men who a few years ago were in the darkness of heathenism, or whose fathers were heathen. Some of the most perfect work has been done by Wakavirondo boys, pupils of the C.M.S. industrial school, who were recently naked heathen."

Evangelistic work

The progress of Christianity in the diocese is not without fluctuations. The Rev. H. B. Lewin reports in the Ankole rural deanery a great movement towards Christianity in parts, and elsewhere a relapse towards witchcraft and heathenism. The outbreak of rinderpest which has wiped out the cattle of the country and left its African king with 500 head instead of 20,000 has been a severe blow in every way, yet the king and his prime minister have been most generous to the Mission. In the district of Kigezi (Ankole) a spread of Mohammedanism is recorded, through government officials who belong to that faith. In Ankole the French Roman Catholic Mission has four European stations manned by fourteen priests; our own Church one station with one clergyman and one woman missionary. The advance in Kavirondo continues, mainly through the exertions of the people themselves. The Rev. F. H. Wright writes:—

> A pleasing feature of the work is the evangelistic zeal of the Kavirondo boys who have been taught in Nairobi, Kisumu, or Maseno, and go back to their reserves and start village schools. In this way the Gospel is being spread over the whole of Kavirondo. Down the line (Uganda Railway) the Kavirondo, at the various railway stations, and on the settlers' farms, are starting schools and services everywhere they go—so much so that many of the settlers have found it profitable to build a school in order to encourage labour. In other places, where the Europeans are not sympathetic, the people meet under a tree Sunday by Sunday and one of their number conducts a service. An instance of this shows how keen they are. I was in a train which arrived at a wayside station just after sunset one evening. Another train was waiting there, and I heard the words of a Kavirondo hymn being sung. Drawing near, I heard one of a group in a third-class carriage offering prayer, the hymn having finished; and then all joined in the Lord's Prayer, and one pronounced the "grace." I found they were labourers from a farm near Nakuru, returning to their homes on completion of their contract. To hear praise and prayer ascending in the semi-darkness thus in the wilderness, from these erstwhile naked savages, touched me very much. The Kavirondo have shown great generosity, and contributed to the building of churches and support of teachers, but the last two years of famine have tried them very much—food has cost ten times the amount it did—and their capacity for giving has been very greatly curtailed.

The Report of the Mission notes that in many of the pioneer districts there is not only a keen demand for education, but real generosity on the part of new adherents, more in fact than among older Christians.

The African king of Kiziba, a region to the south-west of the Victoria Nyanza and in Tanganyika, but worked under the Uganda Missionary Committee, was baptized in 1919. At an enthusiastic peace celebration at Bukoba in July, about £7 was collected during the service in aid of St. Dunstan's Hospital for the Blind, and on the following Sunday the king was baptized by the name of Edward George.

Co-operation

Co-operation with other missions on the basis of the Kikuyu Alliance is helping the work in Uganda generally, and relations with the Roman Catholic missionaries are on the whole friendly.

Mohammedan Lands

EGYPT MISSION

Founded: 1825; resumed, 1882. Sphere: Within Egypt and the Northern Anglo-Egyptian Sudan. Diocese: Jerusalem. Bishop: Rennie MacInnes; assistant bishop: Llewellyn Henry Gwynne. Foreign clergymen: 5. Other foreign missionaries: 45. Christian adherents: 428. (For other statistics see pp. xii–xv.) Principal stations: Cairo, Old Cairo, Ashmoun, Menouf, and Shubra Zangra, in Egypt; and Khartoum, Omdurman, and Wad Medani, in the Northern Sudan.

EGYPT.—Serious disturbances occurred in Egypt in the spring of 1919. The dislocation of missionary work through them has, on the whole, been less than might have been feared, but the eventual effect of the agitation upon evangelization remains to be seen. A greater degree of "self-determination" in the government of Egypt may well result in an increase of Moslem opposition, perhaps more from the modernist propaganda than from the old conservative bigotry.

An uncertain outlook

One element which increases the uncertainty of the outlook is the relation of the Copts to the nationalist movement. On April 20 all Europeans were withdrawn to the protected area in Cairo. The Armenians, who were regarded as pro-English, had their houses broken into and burnt, and in some cases the inmates were murdered. On the other hand "at the very time that our British soldiers were guarding Armenian churches filled with hundreds of terrified Armenian children, and others of our men were sleeping out in the streets and guarding Armenian houses from outrage and murder, the two Armenian archbishops visited the Azhar (the unofficial centre of the revolutionary movement) and publicly stated that they were in full sympathy with the nationalist movement, and gave a large subscription of some thousands to its funds." It can only be supposed that the Copts were feeling that in view of the probability of self-government their position would be impossible if they failed to fall in with the nationalist movement. On the other hand the attitude of the people to the women missionaries at Shubra Zanga shows the effect of Christian life in a softening of bigotry and intolerance. Canon Gairdner tells us that a memorial was prepared by missionaries, after interviews with leading persons, regarding the causes of the disturbances, and was presented to the Milner Commission. Certain it is that the more the administration is under the influence of Christian principle, the more probable will be a real solution of the great difficulties that beset it.

Evangelization

Owing to the unrest it was necessary to close down the bi-weekly evangelistic meetings in the centre of Cairo, but they were soon reopened and the work has since gone on steadily. It was impossible to secure a central site for the preaching place, but a small Arabic bookshop has been opened near by. The evangelistic work of the hospitals cannot be fully exploited for lack of sufficient forces, but their work has been comparatively little interrupted, though there has been a restlessness and impatience of direction among the patients, both men and women, which to some extent has interfered with Christian influence. Four Moslems were baptized in February as a result of medical work in Old Cairo and at Menouf. The Rev. W. W. Cash, who was Divisional Chaplain during the war, in November, 1918, had the superintendence of 150 chaplains, but a year later the number was reduced to 50. He has now taken over from Canon Gairdner the secretariat of the Mission. On the 3rd March, 1919, Mr. Cash was hastily called to Menouf on account of the outbreak, and on his way had a narrow escape from the rioters, but he tells us that the mob in no case destroyed C.M.S. buildings, and the hospital staff were able to carry on their ordinary dispensary work during the riots. At Shubra Zanga Miss Cay and Miss Lewis were not only allowed, but requested by leading inhabitants to remain at their station throughout. Miss Cay writes :—

Good feeling during unrest

During the riots the villagers made a point of showing friendliness to the missionaries, even those who were strongly on the nationalist side seeming quite free from personal animosity. At one time, when it was thought that the missionaries were to be removed to a town for greater safety, representatives of the leading families in the place called and promised to protect them if they would remain ; and when fighting was going on in Cairo and elsewhere, they were invited to dinner with native friends, and at the close of the meal the mistress of the house asked if they had brought "The Book," and listened with great interest to the narrative of the death and resurrection of Christ. Another great contrast has been between the circumstances attending the coming out of the first convert and that of the second. The one raised a storm; the mission house was stoned, a boycott attempted, and the lad who had confessed his faith cruelly treated. The second convert has had nothing worse to bear than some taunts, and there is every reason to hope that when baptized he will be able to live in the village. More remarkable still, his marriage has taken place since his reception as a catechumen, and the wife comes openly to the Bible lessons, her brother, who gave her in marriage, often being present as well.

Schools

The boys' school in Old Cairo kept on its work during the strikes, which caused interruption in almost every other institution. The Mohammed Ali school for girls was closed for two months, but the school at Kasr el-Doubara continued open throughout. Although it had been impossible to increase the salaries of the teachers more than by twenty per cent. to meet a hundred per cent. increase in cost of living, yet so far they remained faithful to the school though they could have secured double pay elsewhere ; but it is exceedingly difficult to retain the new candidates who have just passed for their certificate. In the work among women, Miss H. M. Harrison reports that despite the unrest there was much readiness on the part of the Moslems to listen to the Christian message. Some endeavours were made to help the Coptic Christians in the villages, but the women showed themselves ignorant and unruly.

In connexion with the committee of the Cairo pastorate we hear that the members maintained their subscriptions, notwithstanding the great financial strain and high prices.

Canon Gairdner reports that the Cairo Study Centre for preparation of missionaries is increasing in numbers and activity, and that the "Orient and Occident," hitherto a C.M.S. Arabic Christian monthly, has been put under the control of an inter-mission board which is being joined by Dr. Zwemer. The magazine was founded by D. M. Thornton in 1905, and has done a great work in presenting the Christian message to thoughtful Egyptians.

NORTHERN SUDAN.—In the Northern Sudan the chief work is that of the girls' schools. The boarding school at Omdurman made £70 towards its expenses by a sale of work which the girls had done. At Khartoum a general sale of work, assisted by the Governor-General and Lady Slade, produced £500 towards the upkeep of the schools in this district, and the Government are sending to it twenty liberated slave children, with a yearly grant for each.

SUDAN MISSION

Founded: 1906. Sphere: Within the Southern Anglo-Egyptian Sudan. Diocese: Jerusalem. Bishop: Rennie MacInnes; assistant bishop: Llewellyn Henry Gwynne. Foreign clergymen: 7. Other foreign missionaries: 5. Principal stations: Malek, Yei, and Lau among the Dinkas, and Yambio among the Azandi.

IN the Southern Sudan the work is still difficult and elementary. Mr. Scamell finds the Dinkas apathetic about the education of their children, as they see no monetary benefit accruing from it. This Mission forms an outpost stretching forth its hands towards the northernmost station of the Uganda Protectorate, with which it has been linked by help received from Baganda teachers.

PALESTINE MISSION

Founded: 1851. Sphere: Within Palestine. Diocese: Jerusalem. Bishop: Rennie MacInnes. Palestinian clergymen: 8. Foreign clergymen: 7. Other foreign missionaries: 41. Christian adherents: 2,351. (For other statistics see pp. xii–xv.) Principal stations: Jerusalem, Jaffa, Gaza, Nablous, Nazareth, and Haifa, west of the Jordan; and Salt, east of the Jordan.

THE record of the year is one of missionaries gradually returning and buildings for school and hospital being restored. Miss Tiffin of Jaffa reports that the whole pre-war staff of the hospital had returned, and religious teaching had been restored as in pre-war days, but cooks demanded £72 a year and all found, and nurses £102. At Nazareth the buildings were not greatly damaged, and the town as a whole was cleaner than before the war. The orphanage has now forty inmates under regular instruction. Many of the village schools cannot be reopened through lack of funds. The native pastors carried on services here throughout the war.

Jaffa

Nazareth

At Salt the buildings were greatly damaged, having been used as a Turkish hospital. When the missionaries returned they found that dead, dying, and helpless Turkish soldiers had been left behind in the church, which had to be cleansed and reopened for services with such fittings as were available. In November the C.M.S. master reopened the school and the missionaries were hoping soon to have the dispensary going. Dr. F. Johnson reports that at the signing of the peace the Christians were full of joy, the Moslems all gloom. He thinks that the real division of the peoples of Palestine is not racial but religious. At Nablous, Miss M. Dyce Sharp reopened the hospital at the end of 1918, and has worked there as sister under a Syrian doctor. She anticipates that in future Government will do much more in the way of sanitary and medical aid, and that a fairly plentiful supply of good Syrian doctors trained in other countries will be available for the medical needs of the people. At Jerusalem the Rev. Ibrahim Baz, with his wife and daughter, stayed throughout the war and since the Armistice Bishop Gobat School has been reopened with seventy boys, including some Moslems and Jews. They were eager to make up for lost time, but their vitality was lowered by the hardships of war time. The principal, Mr. F. T. Ellis, is in touch with fifty-five old boys, of whom four are holding the highest posts possible for Syrians as local advisers to military governors of large towns. Some of the boys have gone on to the English College at Jerusalem, which, though formerly under the C.M.S., has been reopened under a scheme of co-operation between that and other societies.

TURKISH ARABIA MISSION

Founded: 1883. Sphere: Within Mesopotamia. Foreign clergyman: 1. Other foreign missionaries: 6. Christian adherents: 160. (For other statistics see pp. xii–xv.) Principal stations: Baghdad and Mosul.

At Mosul, relief work has mainly been the order of the day, and the same holds good of Baghdad. The organization of future work will no longer be in C.M.S. hands, as the Society is withdrawing from this Mission. The Rev. Waris-ud-din, of the Punjab Mission, has continued his chaplaincy work for Indian Christian troops in Mesopotamia during the past year, among Indian Christians speaking Urdu and Punjabi. His district reached from the Caspian Sea to the Euphrates (about 1000 miles) and from Kut to Mosul (about 550 miles). Padre Waris-ud-din needed no money from outside for his work, as he was an army chaplain, and the Christians, being on good pay, were liberal in giving. The total collections for which he accounts amount to Rs 2274. The largest sum given (Rs 877) was for the restoration of the Amritsar church, which had been destroyed during the riots. He writes that the officers of the Christian Punjabi troops in Mesopotamia speak well of them.

Withdrawal of the C.M.S.

PERSIA MISSION

Founded: 1875. Sphere: Within Southern Persia. Diocese: Persia. Bishop: James Henry Linton. Foreign clergymen: 6. Other foreign missionaries: 37. Christian adherents: 370. (For other statistics see pp. xii–xv.) Principal stations: Isfahan, Yezd, and Kerman.

Consecration of Bishop Linton

It will be remembered that the C.M.S. mission area in Persia covers the southern part of the country, which used to be designated as the British sphere of influence. The northern provinces, once in the Russian sphere of influence, are occupied by the American Presbyterians, who are actively enlarging their operations up to the boundaries of Mesopotamia and Afghanistan. The consecration of Bishop Linton to the vacant see in October, 1919, encourages the hope that C.M.S. operations also may be extended so as to take advantage of the present openings. Bishop Linton realizes the greatness of the task before him—the establishment of a Persian ministry; the development of medical and educational work, both in plant and staff; and the pastoral care of scattered English colonies. The British community at Shiraz has pathetically appealed for a missionary to be stationed there with a view of helping his fellow-countrymen, but the Mission will need considerable strengthening before calls such as this can be effectively answered.

Education and culture

The condition of womanhood in Persia in the main is very low, both as regards literary and general intelligence, but there are evident signs of a women's movement, and education is desired in more quarters than can be supplied. The same holds true of men's education, and under the new political conditions it is of great importance that there should be schools fit to train men of insight and purity of life and character as officials and citizens, to say nothing of the building up of the Church of Christ. The Stuart Memorial College in Isfahan is ready to be made into a training school, both for men and women. Can the teachers and the money be supplied? Dr. D. W. Carr writes of efforts to promote cordial relations between British and Persians, such as the establishment of an Anglo-Persian Club. An educated Persian woman has started a women's paper which the mullahs have unsuccessfully tried to suppress.

Isfahan

Isfahan was visited by two columns of the First Persia Rifles under British Officers, one from Shiraz and one from Kerman; they came in order to carry out a great raid against robbers, and their operations changed the aspect of affairs in the country round about. A sergeant of artillery used to join in the missionary Bible readings, and promised to support a bed in the hospital in memory of Dr. Vernon Starr, of Peshawar, whom he knew when he was in India. One bed is to be supported by the British officers of the Kerman column, and two by the Persian officers and men of the Sixth Infantry. Two Americans gave money for another bed, and other donations came in from visitors. Some printing has been done in the way of tracts and hymns and family prayers, which have been acceptable to the congregation. A book-room which was opened in the hospital has proved attractive and useful. Much help in the hospital work was given by certain old boys of the Julfa school. One of the assistants was baptized in December. Miss Braine-Hartnell writes that an Armenian girl of good family proved herself a useful assistant in the evangelistic staff, and that three adult women were baptized during the year. Miss J. Biggs took a large house in Isfahan for an industrial school and as an evangelistic agency, and had ten inquirers there. The medicine chest is no longer necessary in order to gather the people during itinerations. Books and scripture portions are readily sold, and in a very bigoted country town the missionary stayed in a mullah's house at his wife's pressing invitation. One woman of this place was sister to a Christian woman of Isfahan.

Yezd

In and about Yezd distress, following upon famine and influenza, was still great, and the work of the hospital suffered. Here and elsewhere pressure of medical work prevented direct evangelization. At a hill station during his holiday the missionary had 20,000 visits from patients during July and August.

Kerman

At Kerman hospital work is being reconstructed and school work re-organized.

India and Ceylon

Trying conditions

THE material conditions of India during the past year have been specially trying. The annual letters of the missionaries show that in more than one part famine conditions have been touched. Scarcity has largely prevailed, and everywhere prices have been abnormally high. The visitation of influenza has left the people desolated and weakened. Contact with western civilization has produced demands which were not made before, though the resources for supplying them have but little increased. Indian commerce is prosperous, but the Indian people feel battered and sore, and the odium of this is cast, as always, mostly upon the Government of the day.

The very substantial advance towards self-government embodied in the constitutional reforms which were passed by Parliament, and emphasized by a generous message from the King-Emperor, has not as yet produced the favourable impression that was hoped, though moderate opinion on the whole seems to be hardening, as against extremists, in favour of reasonable co-operation with the British Government in the new administration. The riots of April, 1919, especially in Amritsar, gave expression to the feelings of discontent which had grown up from causes such as those referred to, and were probably exploited by agitators. It is but natural that progress which is not always in a straight line should give rise to friction and heat, seeing that human nature is not yet spiritually renewed. It is here that the work of the missionary and the Christian Church in India comes in, and there can be little doubt that the healthy elements in Indian nationalism are largely due to missionary education and life. Work among Mohammedans has been hampered through the Caliphate agitation, which has been linked up with Hindu nationalism in a common enmity to western rule and influence, and so to the religion brought from the West.

Political agitation

Social reform

Social reform in many ways is moving forwards. The "Indian Social Reformer" chronicles and advocates a crusade against caste, especially in the Southern Presidency where it is strongest, and the same journal constantly discusses the question of how to raise the depressed classes. The most depressed class in India is its women, and among them the course of the war has produced a remarkable change in the desire for education and in the consciousness of nationality, and even a demand for woman suffrage under the new constitution. Lady Chelmsford recently said of women missionaries in India: "They have been the pioneers in all works of love, and if they have done nothing else, the example that missionaries have set by their lives would remain for ever a priceless gift to the people among whom they have chosen to serve."

Education

In the matter of education India is moving on all hands, and notably in primary education for the masses, which is being promoted in native States, such as Baroda and Mysore, not less than in British territory. The number of children at school has nearly doubled since 1900. Indian Christians come next after Parsis, Jains, and Buddhists in percentage of literacy. The difficult question of the nature of the primary education to be given to the masses of India, more especially to the rural Christians, has engaged the attention of an inter-denominational Commission from England and America under the chairmanship of the Rev. A. G. Fraser, principal of Trinity College, Kandy. The object of their inquiries has been to re-shape the education of the Indian Christian villager so as to fit him for his actual environment and enable him to attain a healthy growth, mental and economic, moral and spiritual. The question of a simplified script for India, similar to that already adopted in China, is of far reaching importance in connexion with the extent and effect of education.

The agitation regarding the Conscience Clause in state-aided schools has been overshadowed by political controversy. The conviction seems to be gaining ground that India needs education which will develop personal character, and that this cannot be had without the work of religious teachers who believe what they teach. The report of the Calcutta University Commission has direct reference only to the University of Calcutta itself, but it is being widely canvassed in other Presidencies, and it may well be that it will be followed in its main lines throughout India, though this must remain in uncertainty till the policy of the new provincial governments in the matter of education (which is one of the transferred subjects) has been formulated. Meanwhile the report of the Commission contains an emphatic testimony to the value of missionary education :—

> We are strongly of opinion that the missionary colleges form an element in the educational system of Calcutta which is of the highest value, and the withdrawal or weakening of which would be a real impoverishment. There is evidence that this influence might in some cases be withdrawn if the missionary colleges were deprived, by the sudden imposition of a conscience clause, of the opportunity of doing that which, in the judgment of many of them, is the main justification for their undertaking this kind of work—the presentation to all their pupils of a view of what Christianity means.

Christian ideals among outsiders

The work of Christian missions produces reactions. A Hindu missionary society, founded in Bombay, proclaims that caste is a social arrangement and has nothing to do with Hinduism as a religion, and that any one wishing to be a Hindu may be admitted simply by investiture of the sacred thread wound round his body,

Others there are who claim Christ as a guru among their teachers, and themselves as His true interpreters. Others give striking testimony to the work of Christian missions, without themselves accepting Christ. "Christian Missions have played a large part in the great intellectual and spiritual revolution that has slowly gone on in this country during the past century, and they have been one of the potent factors that have produced modern India." (G. K. Devadhar, M.A.) "The ideas that lie at the heart of the Gospel of Christ are slowly but surely permeating every part of Hindu society and modifying every phase of Hindu thought." (Sir Narayan Chandavarkar.) "If you wish to find examples of the noblest benevolence, you must go to Christianity and not to Hinduism." ("Indian Social Reformer.")

Self-determination

Among Indian Christians the questions of self-determination and unity have come strongly to the front. In the Lucknow Diocese the proposition that funds and authority in an entire province should be made over to a predominantly Indian body has been canvassed and is still under discussion. In South India a far-going practical scheme of reunion between the United Church of South India, the Anglican Missions, and the Reformed Syrian Church, has been eagerly discussed, and is to come before the Lambeth Conference.

Former German missions

The operations of the German missions in India have now been divided up as follows: In Chota Nagpur and among immigrants from that diocese an autonomous Indian Lutheran Church has been constituted, assisted by certain British societies. The Hermannsburg and Leipzig Lutheran Missions in South India are mainly taken over by the American Lutheran and the Swedish Church Missions. The larger part of the operations of the Basel Mission in Western India are now carried on by the South Indian United Church, with the aid of a subsidy from two British missionary societies. The Basel Mission College at Calicut (now known as the Malabar Christian College) is linked to the Madras Christian College, an institution which is supported by interdenominational effort. The southern region of the Basel Mission is to be supported by a Swiss Auxiliary under the guidance of the National Missionary Council of India, which represents the Indian missionary body generally. Taken as a whole, the larger part of this work will be carried on by Lutheran agencies, and a smaller proportion by co-operative effort.

PUNJAB, NORTH-WEST FRONTIER, AND SINDH MISSION

Founded: 1851. Sphere: within the Punjab, Kashmir, the North-West Frontier Province, Baluchistan, and Sindh. Diocese: Lahore. Bishop: Henry Bickersteth Durrant. Indian clergymen: 123. Foreign clergymen: 30. Other foreign missionaries: 88. Christian adherents of the Mission: 32,218. (For other statistics see pp. xii–xv.) Principal stations: Lahore, Multan, Clarkabad, Gojra, Amritsar, Batala, Tarn Taran, Narowal, Simla, and Kotgur, in the Punjab; Srinagar and Islamabad in Kashmir; Peshawar, Bannu, and Dera Ismail Khan, in the North-west Frontier Province; Quetta, in Baluchistan; and Karachi, Haidarabad, and Sukkur, in Sindh.

Race division

In the Punjab Mission, as elsewhere, the note of weariness and sadness owing to the sharpening of race division and the shortness of staff is prevalent. A missionary of thirty-five years' standing feels that "it is impossible to write an interesting report with a tired brain, when there are no younger workers to help." More than one missionary is of opinion that the tendency of the people is towards secularity and disregard of religion, disputes about which, they feel, have involved them in unnecessary troubles. Students from this, as from other provinces, who go to western lands, bring back advanced ideas. Many Indian ladies attended the Indian National Congress at Delhi, not a few of them unveiled, and they showed great keenness in listening to the debates. Oxford has an Indian Union which last Trinity term elected as its president Miss Shukla Behari Lal, herself the daughter of a practical social reformer, Dr. D. L. Dhingra, chief medical officer of the Jhind State in the Punjab.

Amritsar

The Punjab.—Amritsar was chosen as the first mission centre of the Punjab because it was the centre of the Sikh religion and rule. It was there that the chief explosion occurred in April, 1919. European bank managers and others were murdered, and a missionary of the C.E.Z.M.S., Miss Marcella Sherwood, was murderously assaulted in the city, where she had gone to close her girls' school. Practically no attacks were made on Indian Christians, though the mission church and bookshop at Amritsar were destroyed and the girls' middle school was being attacked when help arrived. Inevitably the disturbed state of the country necessitated the closing of the women's work in and around Amritsar during the summer, except such as could be kept up by Indian Christians; they bravely pursued their work and were unmolested, showing that the bad feeling was, as a rule, not religious but racial. In the autumn work was generally resumed. Nearly Rs 900 were received from Indian Christian soldiers serving in Mesopotamia towards re-furnishing the destroyed church, and Rs 100 from the congregation of the S.P.G. mission church of St. Stephen, Delhi. The master and boys in the mission high school remained loyal during the difficult time. The Rev. A. I. Kay writes of an old boy who had been a Mohammedan, and was baptized at Jabalpur on his way to Mesopotamia with his regiment.

Lahore

At Lahore, St. John's Divinity School is approaching the jubilee of its foundation by Bishop French in 1870. It had nine divinity students, four of them candidates for deacon's or priest's orders, who were admitted by the Bishop of Lahore at Trinity, 1919, and Lent, 1920. The inmates of St. John's Hostel, connected with the divinity school, are stated to be out of sympathy with the religious outlook of the place. The congregation of the town church of Holy Trinity is growing in fellowship and zeal. The Rev. K. N. Dina Nath issues a bulletin which helps to weld together the scattered members, and fellowship with Christians of other denominations is cultivated. At the last meeting of the Central Mission Council—the governing body of the Punjab Mission in which Indians and foreigners take part—greater enthusiasm than formerly was shown for the co-operation of the races in the effort to form a united self-governing Church.

Multan

The Rev. W. J. Abigail of Multan writes that his teaching in the school is nearly all of the Bible, with occasional periods in English or history or science, and he works through the Bible in a year, making the boys reproduce daily in writing what they remember. He adds :—

> And do the boys stand all this Bible teaching? They do, and listen with keen interest. The Bible when properly taught is a fascinating book, and, as I said, I feel that I am beginning to know how to teach it.

The mass movement, which has spread into the Multan district with the southward extension of irrigation, requires much more time than the Rev. A. C. Clarke has been able to give to it. He found Christian congregations in five villages, besides many scattered communities, and their immigration and settlement are likely to continue. A Mohammedan lad whom he baptized is now qualifying at St. John's Divinity School for the work of catechist.

Chenab Colony

The Rev. W. P. Hares writes that the village Christians of the Chenab Colony were thoroughly staunch during the time of unrest. His district measures about 4000 square miles, in which he is assisted by one Indian deacon. The two large Christian villages of Montgomerywala and Batemanabad are without resident pastors, and there is no English or Indian lady missionary working among women in the whole district. We can hardly be surprised that misconduct and bickerings should occur among flocks which are thus neglected. During his three years in this district Mr. Hares has baptized hardly any adults from among the Chuhras, as he feels it is wrong to do so without reasonable hope of instructing them properly afterwards. Hundreds of people have begged for admission :—

> I have here a big pile of their written requests, some of them with thirty or forty thumb impressions, but I haven't the workers to teach them, and if

I had the workers I haven't the money to pay them. And now during the last two months a new opportunity for work among an entirely new tribe has presented itself. From four different villages, all widely separated, I have received requests for teachers from a tribe called Sansis. I baptized the first family from this tribe about a month ago. Since then men from three other villages have asked for Christian teaching. Then there is the beginning of a movement among the Chamars (leather workers), too, and I hope to baptize two young men from that tribe shortly. I am searching for a Chamar worker, and hope to get one soon for the thousands of Chamars scattered throughout this district. The Janglis [=wild men: the inhabitants before the district was colonized], who own about 200 villages in the Gojra mission area, are quite untouched, and I long to get a worker among them, but see no immediate prospect of this.

Notwithstanding the shortage of workers there has been progress in self-support. In 1916 the entire income from local sources, including government grants for schools, was Rs 500. In ten months of 1919 the wedding fees and free-will offerings, besides collections in church, amounted to Rs 2100. There are nine primary schools in the Gojra district and three in the Batemanabad circle, with 293 boys and 83 girls.

Jandiala

At Jandiala the Rev. Roshan Khan has been successful in getting religious articles published in Christian and non-Christian newspapers, but is prevented from sending more manuscripts by lack of time. He has learned Sanskrit from a sadhu belonging to the "Sanyasi Mission" (a body of unbaptized believers in Christ), to whom he explains the Bible. He considers these people good Christians and says that there are Brahmans and graduates among them.

Asrapur

The Rev. P. Buta Singh writes that during the time of the disturbances over thirty of the village Christians came in to assist and protect him at Asrapur.

Batala

In the Batala district the panchayats are doing good work for church discipline. There is a lack of churches for the village congregations, and poverty stands in the way of erecting more. The inter-mission meetings of preachers and other Christians have been helpful in promoting fellowship and co-operation. The Rev. A. B. Chandulall, a master in the Baring High School, at Batala, takes the boys out to camp once a year, "the idea being to get into more vital touch with them, to be able to influence them for Christ, and generally to be a means of uplift to them. We invite specialists in boys' work to come and help. These camps have proved very helpful to the life of our school." The boys have been helping with evangelistic lantern meetings in the town. A young Brahman who had been educated in a mission school came to him for baptism and was eventually admitted. Mr. Chandulall feels that the Indian Christians in Batala are taking an increasing part in the life and work of their Church, but he prays for a fresh outpouring of the Holy Spirit.

Tarn Taran

At Tarn Taran, the Rev. D. R. M. F. Creighton has been carrying on during Canon E. Guilford's absence. Miss L. Claydon found the women in the villages friendly, but apprehensive as to what the future of the British Raj might be. Many of the lepers in the asylum have been baptized during the year.

Narowal

In the Narowal district the village schools have done well in their examination on religious knowledge. The Narowal missionaries were not obliged to leave the station during the riots, though the women and children were sent away soon after Easter. The Rev. Waris-ud-din, M.B.E., who has been in charge of Christian troops in Mesopotamia and Persia, was warmly welcomed on a visit to the station in November, as being the first Narowal schoolboy who had been admitted to the Order of the British Empire. He was received at the railway station with a band and fireworks and preached twice in the church. His Mohammedan relatives received him in their house during his visit, a proceeding which a generation ago would have been utterly impossible.

Simla

At Simla Lady Chelmsford and several members of Council attended St. Thomas's Church on the anniversary Sunday of the consecration. The Rev. A. E. Ball feels that this was an impressive testimony to the oneness of the Indian and English in Christ.

Srinagar

KASHMIR.—The Rev. F. E. Lucey sends a sketch of an average day in the life of the principal of the great central school in Srinagar. The work included administering a loan fund which saves masters from the clutches of the moneylender, scrutinizing requests for discharge certificates, the sending of a sick boy to the mission hospital, dealing with complaints of damage, arrangements for a lecture, the collecting book for replenishing the funds of the mission, and finally the weekly regatta on the lake when the school boats compete with one another, ending with the National Anthem and the Maharajah's anthem. Mr. Tyndale-Biscoe was on furlough, the strain of fighting rice profiteering in Srinagar, with all its intricate intrigues in high quarters, added to the work of the school, having seriously affected his health. In the school hostel the Christians include eight Ladakhis, three Gilgitis, three Punjabis, a Pathan, and a Kashmiri; the last named a graduate convert of the school who has done good service in Palestine.

The medical mission in Srinagar has lost its head in the person of Dr. Arthur Neve, who succumbed to influenza on September 5 last. In 1881 Dr. Neve began work in Srinagar in temporary barracks on the hill, now occupied by the hospital, with very elementary equipment. During the intervening years the work has so developed that it now has one of the largest of mission hospitals with the most modern improvements, and a whole generation of Kashmiris from town and district have been treated there. Dr. Neve has been an adviser to successive Maharajahs and a father to the Christian community, as well as lay minister in the English church, where his voluntary services were very frequently given. His name and his achievements as doctor and mountaineer were known far beyond Kashmir, and there were few men who gained the esteem and affection of outsiders as well as of missionaries in a like degree.

Islamabad

Dr. Minnie Gomery, Miss Newnham, and Miss Coverdale came home on furlough in the autumn, and the women's hospital at Islamabad has had to be closed during their absence.

NORTH-WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE.—Much of the medical work which is so characteristic of the stations on the frontier was carried on in 1919 under government auspices. At the time of the April riots in Lahore and Amritsar, there was unrest in Peshawar too, but this was much more easily quelled. When the Afghan War broke out in May the Government were glad to accept Dr. R. J. H. Cox's offer of help, and put him in charge of the Indian Army Hospital. Miss F. M. Clarke, who was associated with him as nurse, writes that the work was extraordinarily heavy, but she and the other sisters were under no restrictions in dealing with Christians and non-Christians alike. The officers were most kind and many of the non-Christians would come to listen to services that were being held in the wards for Christian patients. Miss Clarke was astonished at the considerable number of Christians among all grades of army service, a large proportion being from the South Indian Regiments. This service of missionary nurses in an Indian frontier war hospital was a new experiment, but it appears to have been successful; at any rate Miss Clarke met with nothing but kindness from British and Indian alike. No patient refused to take food or medicine from her hand, though Hindus would decline such service from Mohammedans, and vice versa. One of the Indian Christian doctors told her that he could give food to either Hindus or Mohammedans when they would not take it from each other. Miss Clarke had heard of a Pathan convert boy, about whom they had been anxious, that he was a havildar in the army motor works at Basra, and evidently was getting on very well. Dr. Cox was thanked by the commander of the Afghan Field Force for the help given by the medical mission in caring for the sick and wounded. The C.E.Z.M.S. hospital in Peshawar city had to be evacuated by the ladies, and has not yet been reopened.

Peshawar

The Edwardes High School and College suffered from unsettlement less than other institutions, but it became necessary to close it from June 1, and it had to be reopened in temporary buildings, the college proper having been commandeered for officers' quarters. Canon J. A. Wood writes that the college had the best percentage in the Punjab University intermediate arts examination. An Indian Christian professor, who left to take up a higher appointment in Lahore, was replaced by a Syrian Christian from South India. In spite of difficulties, numbers were nearly up to those of last year. One old student sends an allowance of Rs 3 per month to help some poor student now in college. Another prays daily for light and purity. Again, another asks God for help and guidance, and discusses measures for removing poverty and raising morality in India. A student new to the college finds that weekly Sunday rest enables him to do more work than he could do before in seven days.

Work among low-caste people in and about Peshawar has been hindered by the vagaries of a bogus Christian pastor who baptizes at Rs 1 a head; on the other hand, the Rev. T. Bomford tells of a Mohammedan ex-student and official of good family who visited the low-caste Christians in Jamrud, and expressed his appreciation of their worship and conduct by giving a treat of sweetmeats to their children. He bought a Pushto New Testament for his wife to read. Mr. Bomford notes the scattering of Christians through war service all over India. On one day he was approached by three Christians, a Tamil, a Gujerati, and a Marathi; each knew a little English but nothing of the local language, and wanted a Bible in his own vernacular. The Rev. J. M. Nepal Singh writes that the low-caste people continue to come in, and desire instruction and baptism. He himself had been working among Indian Christian soldiers of various corps both in Peshawar and Baluchistan, and had found Christian soldiers in almost every division on the frontier.

Bannu

The Rev. C. F. Hall of Bannu had been chaplain to the Waziristan Field Force, and assistant Red Cross commissioner, besides being in charge of the station and the school. Ministrations to the congregation were carried on by the Rev. Samsun Khan, a newly ordained deacon. The destruction of the branch hospital at Thal during the Afghan invasion in May last was complete. The buildings were looted and burned and only the walls left standing. Happily the Christian compounder and his family were able to escape, and eventually were rescued by British forces. Dr. Alice Pennell, when writing, was still medical officer at Bannu of the Government, to whom the mission hospital was temporarily transferred, as well as in charge of the mission work. She feels the great need of a good girls' school. In her opinion, "India does not yet need women athletes; she is still in the stage of needing women who can be domestic even though educated."

Dera Ismail Khan

At Dera Ismail Khan the Rev. Aziz-ud-din started an evening prayer meeting with Indian Tamil soldiers there quartered, who used to come also to the morning service on Sundays. These men belonged to the Field Troop Sappers and Miners and the service for them was conducted in English, and translated into Tamil by the quartermaster, who is the son of a South Indian pastor.

BALUCHISTAN.—From Quetta, Miss A. E. Manwaring writes: "The [British] soldiers are always very interested in our hospital. Parties of them come from time to time to look round, and last year they showed their interest in a very practical form by giving Rs 300 towards expenses." Dr. S. Gaster arranged a course of sixteen lectures for English-speaking Indians during the spring and summer. Several of these were given by military officers and civilians. The subjects were varied, but "the largest audience assembled for a lantern lecture on the life of Christ by a military officer." A league for social service, comprising a night school and other work, was started by non-Christians. To help them Dr. Gaster conducted a first-aid class for men, while Dr. Gertrude Stuart of the C.E.Z.M.S. hospital took one for girls. The Rev. J. Redman writes that among fourteen adults baptized in Quetta, one candidate was a Chinese. He continues:— Quetta

> In the early part of the summer a company of the mechanical transport training school was stationed at Quetta, composed of Indians from all parts of India, from Madras in the south to Muradabad in the north. The havildar was a very smart Assamese from near Shillong. A large proportion of the men were Christians, so during their sojourn here we had parade service for them every Sunday; from forty to fifty used to be present. Lantern addresses were given in their quarters for their benefit. . . . There are many scattered Christians connected with our Church at various stations on the railway lines. We try to keep in touch by correspondence, and by an occasional visit. At Birjand, in East Persia, Mr. Bell, a member of our congregation, a Marathi accountant, holds service on Tuesdays for the Indian Christians.

SINDH.—The peaceful invasion of Sindh by colonists rapidly settling in the newly-irrigated territories of the Indus valley bids fair to transplant the mass movement into that province, and thus greatly to increase the numbers of the Christian Church in Sindh, although these immigrants are foreigners and, speaking Punjabi, cannot understand or be understood by the Sindhis in whose midst they are settling. The Rev. D. S. Harper writes that the Christian groups and communities are scattered at great distances over the Haidarabad district. They number some 400 and are ministered to by a missionary, a senior reader in weak health, a village reader, and a partly trained woman teacher. These rural Christians are largely in debt to their masters. Ten of them served in an Indian Christian regiment and have received small holdings of land as a reward. There is also a movement among the Bhils settled in this district. Some time ago one of their gurus was baptized, and he has been evangelizing others. The 71st Punjabi (Christian) regiment was stationed Haidarabad for some time at Haidarabad and was ministered to by the mission staff. A metrical version of the Psalms in Sindhi has been published.

Karachi

The Rev. P. Ireland Jones emphasizes the importance of Karachi as being the largest and leading city in the diocese of Lahore. It is a great terminus for land, sea, and air traffic. Free and compulsory education is shortly to be introduced there, as in all the great Indian cities. The Rev. J. F. Snee, who has been transferred to Karachi from Clarkabad, feels the complexity of the work among Christians who speak seventeen different languages, and the utter inadequacy of the present efforts to evangelize in any of them.

WESTERN INDIA MISSION

Founded: 1820. Sphere: within the Bombay Presidency. Diocese: Bombay. Bishop: Edwin James Palmer. Indian clergymen: 14. Foreign clergymen: 12. Other foreign missionaries: 24. Christian adherents: 8274. (For other statistics see pp. xii–xv.) Principal stations: Bombay, Nasik, Poona, Manmad, and Aurangabad, and, among the Bhils, Kherwara, Biladia, and Lusadia.

THE stations of the Western India Mission fall into four groups: first, the City and Island of Bombay, on the coast; second, the chain of missions beyond the Ghats, from Poona in the south to Manmad in the north; third, Aurangabad (in the Nizam's Dominions), with the surrounding country, where a great mass movement is going on; and fourth, the stations of the Bhil Country farther north, in Rajputana and Gujerat. A marked feature of the Mission as a whole, which for many years has been scantily supplied with foreign missionaries, is the large amount of work done by the Indian clergy, several of whom are in charge of stations. The staff number, of foreigners, seven men and four women; of Indians, eleven men and one woman, among whom there are outstanding names such as those of Canon D. L. Joshi and the Rev. D. P. K. Shindé and D. A. Yardi, not to mention others. Co-operation and sympathetic touch with other Churches continues to be in evidence. A joint service of thanksgiving was held in Bombay Cathedral in July last, at which many Indian Christians were present and in which members of various Churches took part. The whole Marathi-speaking Church has suffered a great loss by the death of Mr. M. W. Tilak, a well-known Christian patriot and poet, whose first impulse towards Christianity was given by conversation with an English gentleman in a railway train. Mr. Tilak was widely known and appreciated as a writer and poet by a large circle of Hindus, as well as of Christians; in fact, he was a leader in the revival of modern Marathi literature, not less than a witness for Christ.

Bombay

BOMBAY, ETC.—From Bombay it is reported that the converts' home under the charge of Canon Joshi has continued to be of great use in evangelistic, as well as in pastoral work. Many baptisms have taken place of men who have there found a place of quiet and protection, among them a member of the Brahmo Samaj, two gentlemen of the Brahman and Bania castes respectively, and a Parsi. The Mohammedan mission and ministrations to Urdu-speaking Christians are now carried on by a diocesan committee. Many Urdu handbills are distributed after preachings to Mohammedans, and the openings among this large community in Bombay are considerable, but the Rev. H. J. Lane Smith has been compelled to leave this work for the time being and to take up the secretariat of the Mission. The Bombay District Church Council is increasing its contribution towards the support of the pastorates. Canon Joshi tells us that during six years 232 persons have been gathered into the Christian Church, of whom 159 were Marathis and 73 Gujeratis. A new district church council for Christians in and about the great railway junction of Bhusawal, above Bombay, has recently been formed. The congregation there is ministered to by an ex-railway guard who is now a candidate for ordination as honorary pastor. The girl guides in the Emmanuel Girls' High School now number thirty-four, of whom sixteen took part in a girls' camp at Matheran, two of them being Hindus. In the Robert Money Boys' School, similarly, the boy scout movement is flourishing, but the Rev. H. W. Lea-Wilson finds it necessary to guard against its use for purposes of Hindu propaganda, and has remarked a more anti-Christian attitude among the boys than before. He has made "preparation for self-government" a theme of instruction in school, an example which perhaps might be followed elsewhere with advantage. The congregation at Girgaum Church makes good progress in liberality, and its co-operative credit society is progressing.

Nasik

At Nasik, under the Rev. D. P. K. Shindé, work in the town and villages has been hampered by lack of helpers, but nevertheless there have been eighty-five baptisms, including those of children. One of these was a Maratha lad about 19 years of age, who belonged to a well-known Indian circus, being a near relative of the proprietor and himself a notable actor in the show, and who handled the wild beasts with great skill and courage. Converts come from many different castes. On one Sunday Mr. Shindé baptized eighteen persons in the city school chapel who were from six different castes. He was elected vice-president of the municipality, and in that capacity had many opportunities both for friendly co-operation with non-Christians and for Christian witness. There is the beginning of a mass movement in the Nasik district. While the missionary was on tour a Hindu mendicant came and begged him to go to his village and teach them of the great Guru. Mr. Shindé went there and spent the night preaching to the mendicant and his friends. When he again visited the place he found that this man had prepared for baptism, as far as his knowledge went, twenty-one persons in five families, including his own, and they were baptized before a large crowd of people. At the orphanage eight boys who had entered as Hindus were baptized during the year. The sale of gospels and hymn books by the help of voluntary workers from the orphanage was very considerable (3000 and 1400 respectively).

Manmad

At Manmad, under the Rev. R. G. Jagtap, and at various points on the railways, the work was carried on by means of cottage meetings, and fourteen adults were baptized. The Rev. W. T. Veel reports that in this district work among the Mahars is opening up.

Poona

The Rev. I. Y. Yesudian, Tamil pastor at Poona, baptized thirteen adults, two of whom were Brahmans, and ministered to the Christian soldiers and camp followers from South India. St. Helena's Girls' School under Miss S. Sorabji is flourishing, and letters received from former pupils tell of the lessons learned and character formed there. A woman, who had passed through the school from the kindergarten upwards, recently graduated as B.A. and has joined the staff of the school.

Aurangabad

The work in and around Aurangabad continues to grow. The Rev. H. T. Vodden had to cope in 1919 with famine conditions and disease, besides the ever-spreading village movement. The number of baptized persons in the district has risen from 2200 to 3150, who live in 171 villages, and there were 450 persons in confirmation classes. The movement was spreading from the leather-working Mangs to the field-labouring Mahars. Notwithstanding the acute rivalry which exists in Western India as elsewhere between the different sections of outcastes, Mr. Vodden writes that "Maratha farmers, who form the backbone of the village communities, are also showing signs of change. One or two have recently been baptized and others are now under instruction." The great poverty of the village Christians was being countered by the starting of a co-operative banking society for Christian cultivators and traders, which had more than Rs 5000 out on loan at a reasonable interest to provide seed and other necessities. The Rev. Sumant Umap writes :—

> By the great efforts of the missionaries some of them have become priests, evangelists, preachers, teachers, carpenters, tailors, fitters, railway guards, ticket collectors, signallers, station-masters, house servants of the Europeans, farmers, watchmen, soldiers, traders, and labourers; yet some of them are village servants. At the time of the distress rivers, ponds, and wells were dried up. Therefore the Government dug hundreds of wells and supplied water to the cattle and people, yet many cattle died owing to the shortage of grass, a few were supported on roots of the grass and leaves of the trees. Out of these animals some were sold very cheaply, and they were used for eating, and thousands of lives were supported on this flesh. We used to say that as God sent quails to the Israelites and supported Elijah with meat through the ravens, so God fed us on flesh. Some of us have said that God has sent the Rev. H. T. Vodden to be the next Joseph. He bought many sacks of grains from a long distance and supplied to us and to the Government. Clothes were given to the poor. Relief works were opened, and as soon as the rainy season came he gave seed to the farmers for the first crop. In the same way, he established the Co-operative Society, and gave people seed and money for the second crop, and so we did not feel the famine time.

It is no wonder that under such pressure of work, responsibility, and care Mr. Vodden's health broke down. The Rev. A. G. Fraser, of Ceylon, writes of a visit that he paid to this district, telling how greatly he was impressed by the effect of the Gospel on the outcastes under a Mohammedan Government, where the missionaries are given a free hand. Not only among the tribes referred to, but among the Bhils who are settled in this district work is beginning. Eight of them came to the Indian pastor, having been taught by a Christian merchant living in the city. These people represented their village, which was one of fishermen; and on hearing from the pastor the story of our Lord's promise to St. Peter after the miraculous draught of fishes their faces lighted up and they said: "With God's help we will fish all the people of our village." This may be the beginning of a greater work among the Bhils than has yet been done; and it shows how the mass movement is affecting not only the higher castes, but the aborigines also.

Lusadia

Kherwara

Biladia

BHIL MISSION.—It has been noticed how work among the Bhils is spreading on the outer fringes of the tribe. In the Bhil Mission proper, in and around Lusadia, adult baptisms are on the increase after lean years. The Rev. C. L. Shaw tells of ten at three different places, and of inquirers in five others, but scarcity and high prices render it very difficult to get evangelists. Two catechists needing training were sent to the Irish Presbyterian Training School. Much work had been done on famine relief. At Kherwara, the head-quarters of the Bhil Corps, services are conducted by the missionaries for the British officers and their families. Miss C. E. Fry writes that the time of influenza and famine proved to be a practical test of Christianity among the Christian children of the boarding school, who were ready to stint themselves to provide food for the starving. There was a great lack of Bible women, but at an out-station three miles off a Bhil Christian collected children to teach, with very primitive apparatus for reading and writing, and got together some 200 of them. The women teachers in the villages have their own homes and field work to look to, and are rarely able to give more than three hours a day to the work. At Biladia, too, there are signs of awakening among the people, and the first set of candidates for baptism was being prepared. Mrs. A. I. Birkett, who has returned to the Mission after her husband's death, writes of the terrible famine conditions after drought.

When nothing was left to give to the applicants for relief, the situation seemed to become impossible. "How could we preach Christ's love to them while refusing to help them? I couldn't. Groups assembled and dispersed without a gospel message being delivered." Still many a life was saved and many a death made happier, though fruit is slow in appearing.

UNITED PROVINCES MISSION

Founded: 1813. Sphere: within the United Provinces. Diocese: Lucknow. Bishop: George Herbert Westcott. Indian clergymen: 13. Foreign clergymen: 27. Other foreign missionaries: 160. Christian adherents: 12,569. (For other statistics see pp. xii–xv.) Principal stations: Allahabad, Benares, Gorakhpur, Agra, Muttra, Aligarh, Meerut, Bulandshahr, Meerut, and Annfield in the province of Agra; and Lucknow and Faizabad, in the province of Oudh.

THE unrest in these provinces has been less acute than in the Punjab, and was most in evidence in the north-western district adjacent to that province. From Ghaziabad Miss A. E. Lowick writes that for many nights the missionaries were dressed and ready to go to the station at a given signal, but it was never necessary to do so. After things had quieted down, however, she was attacked one night with sticks by two men as she was sleeping on the veranda of her bungalow, but she escaped with a broken rib and severe bruises which hindered her work for a time. The motive of the crime can only be conjectured. The Rev. J. N. Mukand expresses his opinion that the over-growth of a nationalist spirit has created a diseased racialism for which both Europeans and Indians are responsible.

A missionary assaulted

The much-debated question as to the relations between the Indian and foreigner has been greatly in evidence in this Mission. In April, 1919, certain Indian Christians and missionaries, most of whom were or had been connected with the Y.M.C.A., held an informal conference at Allahabad, in the findings of which the suggestion was put forward that in order to enable Indian Christians to carry on the work of evangelization unhampered by foreign direction, an entire Mission should be made over to a governing body in which Indians would have the determining voice. These findings were discussed in October at a meeting of the Lucknow Diocesan Council, which passed the following resolutions:—

The transfer of Missions to the Indian Church

I. That the missionary section of the Lucknow Diocesan Council, including all the missionaries in priest's orders of the Church Missionary Society and the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, considers that a point has been reached in this diocese when the progress of the Church is hampered by the almost complete retention in foreign hands of the control over the policy, property, and funds of the missionary societies, and that—with a view to encouraging a larger measure of self-government and self-support, removing the sense of impotence which keeps many of the most capable Indian Christians out of mission work, placing the English missionary in the position of a helper to the Indian Church, and removing something of the stigma of foreign-ness from Indian Christianity itself—steps should be taken without delay to give to Indians a far larger measure of control.

II. That a committee . . . should be appointed to consider the above resolution and suggest ways by which the principle could be carried into effect.

III. That this committee be asked to consider, among other things, the following suggestions, which largely transfer the functions of the Allahabad Corresponding Committee and the Diocesan Missions Board to a new Committee :—

(1) That a committee, consisting of an equal number of Indians and Europeans, with the Lord Bishop of Lucknow as chairman, be formed to direct and control the policy and work of the societies.

(2) That the whole budget for evangelistic and educational work should be drawn up by this committee.

(3) That new missionaries should come out only as deemed necessary by this committee.

(4) That the first term of missionaries should be a trial term, and that they should only return, after this first term or after a subsequent furlough, on the recommendation of this committee.

(5) That the allocation and transfer of missionaries should be in the hands of this committee.

The Council also dealt with the increasing reluctance on the part of educated Indian Christians to work in mission schools and colleges, and advocated more democratic methods of control in these institutions. It is clear that while suitable re-organization to meet the needs of the new age may do much to help, the greatest need of the Christian Church in the mission field is a strong increase of the evangelistic spirit of Christ, which will impel all Christians of whatever race to merge their energies and powers in the work of gaining their fellow-men for Christ, and of building up in the faith, by teaching and example, those who have enjoyed less advantages than themselves.

Mass movement work

Mass movement work in these provinces is chiefly in evidence in the northern section, round stations which lie along the valley of the Jumna. In the south-eastern section about Allahabad and Benares, and in Oudh it is as yet non-existent. At Ghaziabad twenty families of Chamars were being prepared for baptism. At the out-station of Lank 300 inquirers were enrolled. From Aligarh the Rev. W. V. K. Treanor reports within the district 2500 Christians and 1500 inquirers in nearly 200 villages. Communications through a sandy country, ill supplied with roads, are difficult. The people show signs of progress, in that Christians are demanding a better qualified type of teacher. Of such, seven were being prepared in the local training school, and two at Allahabad Divinity School. The boys' boarding school is working under difficulties. Lads often run away. The paucity of workers is aggravated by high prices, while sickness and scarcity are weakening the people generally. Owing to malaria, much of the harvest was not cut till very late, yet at the harvest thanksgiving, both here and elsewhere, the people gave offerings, though they themselves were scantily fed and clothed. Christian marriages are on the increase, and the work among the sweeper class has affected the Chamars, or leather-workers, in two villages where they are being taught by sweepers whom otherwise they despised. A Christian village watchman, who was offered by an Arya Samaj missionary a position in the police, refused it for the sake of his faith and work among outcastes. The influenza caused a considerable set-back in certain villages; some who had been baptized turned back and re-built their mud shrines to avert the wrath of the village deity. Unfortunately there are nominal Christians who still believe in the efficacy of these shrines.

At Dehra Dun the Rev. J. N. Mukand is working to disconnect the low-caste converts from their old brotherhood, in order to cut off the heathen influences which bar their progress. At Bulandshahr the Rev. S. Gillespie found the village Christians much shaken in the faith owing partly to scarcity and epidemics, and partly to the efforts of the Arya Samaj, but lapsed Christians were beginning to return. Round about Meerut many baptisms have been taking place. Owing partly to the weakness of staff, the missionaries in the mass movement areas of these provinces have not been able to co-ordinate and unify the lines of their work as much as they hoped to do.

Colleges

The United Provinces Mission is unique in its possession of two colleges, St. John's at Agra and St. Andrew's at Gorakhpur, besides the Oxford and Cambridge Hostel at Allahabad which exercises a strong Christian influence among college students. The institutions, one and all, have suffered from the universal under-staffing, now, it is hoped, at its extreme limit. Canon A. W. Davies, of St. John's College, Agra, mentions that the Rev. L. Steele is dean of the faculty of commerce in the university, and that the college has an endowment for a lectureship in philosophy which may go far towards the establishment of a university chair. The Rev. L. K. Morton writes from Allahabad that the hostellers offered contributions towards the C.M.S. deficit, in gratitude for the benefits which they were enjoying. He had recently received many letters from old students, witnessing to the influence of the hostel in fitting them for a worthy life work. At Gorakhpur the Rev. P. G. Bridge finds that his lectures in ethics and psychology give great openings for Christian teaching. A thoughtful student is disappointed when he finds that philosophy fails to answer the questions of life, and is thus ready to be led up to Christ.

Boys' schools

From St. John's High School, Agra, the Rev. J. Kingdon reported that the charge of the high school and Christian hostel is too much for one man. The hostel had fewer boys, owing partly to the influenza epidemic and partly to apathy on the part of parents. There is an excellent Christian sub-warden, a B.A. of the Punjab University, who is "a good disciplinarian, and withal a man of deep devotion and spirituality." The Rev. S. R. Morse, principal of the Lucknow high school, found himself alone after nine years without furlough, but he had eight Christian teachers on his staff whose help enabled him to keep up regular Bible instruction in every class without outside assistance. Mr. Morse at the time of writing is on furlough, but seriously ill in hospital owing to his long unrelieved labours. From Agra, Miss A. J. Nethercote writes:—

> In January at the request of the head master of the Radha Soami Institute I gave sixteen lessons of one hour each to the nineteen boys (aged from 16 to 20) of the school leaving certificate class. Their object was to accustom themselves to a European's intonation, as they are examined orally in English by a European. With the head's approval the lessons were all from the Life of our Lord, and the school provided each boy with an English Bible. The boys were particularly keen to learn about our Lord's teaching, and discussed religious questions eagerly and with a good deal of spiritual insight. It was an interesting opportunity. The Radha Soami Satsang is a monotheistic sect of nineteenth century origin. All the boys passed their examination and twelve have gone on to St. John's College. One hopes they may continue to be keen about our Lord's teaching. The school would welcome further help in this way and would continue to give a free hand as to Christian teaching, but one fears time will not permit of it.

Girls' schools

The work of Christian girls' schools in this Mission is well developed. In the Meerut school the seniors go into training as teachers or nurses or sub-assistant surgeons. Seventy-six candidates went in for the diocesan scripture examination in April, 1919. Benares is a centre of schools. The normal school had 101 pupils, of whom fifty were boarders; four passed the normal examination and joined the staff of the school, but one, who was a Hindu, went to the theosophist school. When one of her classmates was confirmed this girl wrote a special scripture verse for her to mark the day. The Queen Victoria High School, Agra, under Miss A. F. Wright continues its important and fruitful work with 110 names on the roll, including over eighty boarders. It is the only school in the province which takes domestic science in the school leaving certificate examination. This subject includes first aid, and if an accident takes place in the school there is a great rush of helpers. The Government conferred the war badge on the school in acknowledgment of the excellency of the girls' war needlework. In the holidays they raised Rs 270 for the C.M.S. Thankoffering Fund.

Literary work

The work of literature, which accompanies and supplements that of education, is represented by a famous veteran, the Rev. W. Hooper, D.D., at Mussourie. At the age of 81 he still labours for the benefit of the Indian Christian Church, and has just completed a valuable volume of "Notes on the Bible," being a topical exposition of scripture teachings. He has decided, however, to lay down the dignity of Canon of Lucknow, which has been conferred on the Rev. J. S. C. Bannerjee of Meerut. The Rev. A. J. Harvey, principal of the divinity school, sold nearly 1200 books and scripture portions in a small area during his itineration, and others had a similar experience.

Evangelization

One of the greatest opportunities for evangelization was given by the fair at Muttra, visited by about 100,000 persons. Sadhu Sundar Singh was present, and gave addresses during three days to great numbers. Miss M. Stratton records how the urgent needs of the work among women have again and again been supplied at the last moment in answer to prayer. The work of dispensers in the city has been much appreciated, not only by the people but by the health officer. A zenana pupil of ten years' standing distinguished herself in Red Cross and recruiting work and received the government medal. The Rev. J. Qalandar, of Faizabad, refers to strong anti-Christian propaganda, which is seen throughout the provinces. Arya Samaj missionaries gather up and destroy Christian tracts. A discussion was proposed to be based on Vedic texts and Bible passages on given subjects, to be read out to the audience, but this clear method of comparison is not in favour either with Hindu or Mohammedan emissaries. Mr. Qalandar accepted an invitation to preside at a meeting of the Orthodox Hindu Society of Faizabad, and is working a circulating library. Pandit Sadanand (see REPORT, 1918–19, p. 82) had greatly grieved Mr. Harvey by apostasy to the Arya Samaj after he had been a Christian and suffered much for his faith during two years. Last year he came to Benares to give a lecture on Jesus Christ, but to the consternation of the Arya Samajis at the close of it he boldly confessed Him as Lord, and has returned to the Christian Church with every evidence of true repentance. The Rev. J. Dharmjit bears witness to the blessing which attended Dr. Sherwood Eddy's visit at the beginning of the year, followed later by one from Sadhu Sundar Singh. Many Christians signed a pledge to win at least one soul during the Divali holidays in November. Mr. Dharmjit was saddened, however, by the spectacle of some Christian families living in sin. The centenary of the C.M.S. Benares Mission was celebrated last year. The Collector held an "At Home," to meet the missionaries and Indian Christians, and the church clock was restored and chancel fittings provided as a memorial. An Afghan prince living under government supervision at Benares is an inquirer, his eldest brother having been baptized by the Archdeacon of Lucknow some years ago. At Agra the Rev.

P. C. Chattree refers to the stirring effect of Dr. Eddy's visit in April, 1919. Mr. Chattree's old father was recently baptized, with the result that his Hindu home was broken up. Mr. Chattree hopes for more initiative and responsibility for the Indian Church, to qualify it for self-determination.

CENTRAL PROVINCES AND RAJPUTANA MISSION

Founded: 1855. Sphere: within the Central Provinces and Rajputana. Diocese: Nagpur. Bishop: Eyre Chatterton. Indian clergymen: 6. Foreign clergymen: 6. Other foreign missionaries: 15. Christian adherents: 1657. (For other statistics see pp. xii–xv.) Principal stations: Jabalpur, Katni Murwara, and among the Gonds, Mandla, Patpara, Marpha, and Deori, in the Central Provinces; and Bharatpur, in Rajputana.

THE after effects of the terrible visitation of influenza in November, 1918, are painfully evident in the reports received from this Mission. The population was much more than decimated, and those who remain are weakened and apathetic. From Deori Mr. A. Charles Deori writes that it has been most difficult to keep the day schools going as five of the teachers died of influenza, besides the heads or other bread-winners of many families, leaving widows and children to struggle against the scarcity and high prices which have prevailed ever since. This has increased the apathy already existing among the Gonds regarding the education of their children. Still the experimental farm at Deori was going on reasonably well and the lads were growing in Christian character. Five baptisms of adults took place. At Mandla a sadhu has been singing from door to door Christian Mandla hymns which he had learned from a hymn book that he purchased and grew to like. In the shop of a bookbinder the Rev. Failbus found Christian pictures, and in other cases he came across Christian books showing the effect of literature even in these backward parts of the country. Miss E. E. Smyth, however, complains that the expensiveness of reading-books was a difficulty to the non-Christian women and girls who were learning. She has endeavoured to help them by writing notes on the Scripture Union portions and short stories. The divinity school was transferred to Mandla by the Rev. W. Hodgkinson. It has four students ready to go out as teachers. At Patpara cholera among the girls in the hostel carried Patpara off six, and the number of boys in the Christian school is lessened. The Christian Gonds who had been in the Labour Corps had been returning, most of them having served in India, though a few were still on the frontier and in Mesopotamia. On the whole they seem to have benefited by their military service. At Singpur the converts, who belong to the class of professional musicians, went back because their livelihood depended on participation in idolatry, which they were unwilling to give up. The work has also suffered from lack of continuity. During the past year it has been kept going, but it is difficult to see how preachers can live unless they are allowed to increase their earnings by doing cultivation. Mr. Hodgkinson visited the entire Gond Mission during last cold weather. He experienced no opposition, but only at one place did he receive an invitation to open up fresh work. "The Gonds are not conscious of their spiritual needs and can in no sense be said to be calling out for the Gospel." At the same time, the people are ready to hear and to buy gospels.

Jabalpur

At Jabalpur the high school and its branches have over 1100 boys. The Rev. F. E. Keay has returned to this work, with its great opportunities but imminent danger of bankruptcy. Miss S. M. Clarke writes that after New Year, 1919, health conditions improved, and she was able to carry on six Bible study circles among the 200 Christians clustered round the church. At

Katni Murwara

Katni Murwara the sale of gospel portions has been more than could be expected in the circumstances.

BENGAL AND BIHAR MISSION

Founded: 1816. Sphere: within Bengal and Bihar. Diocese: Calcutta. Bishop: Foss Westcott. Indian clergymen: 30. Foreign clergymen: 25. Other foreign missionaries: 32. Christian adherents: 14,310. (For other statistics see pp. xii–xv.) Principal stations: Calcutta, Doyabari, Krishnagar, Chupra, Bollobhpur, Santirajpur, and Kanchrapara, in Bengal; and Bhagalpur, Deoghar, Purulia, (and among the Santals) Taljhari, Barharwa, Godda, and Bhagaya, in Bihar.

THE Society's work in Bengal is organized under four district church councils—for Calcutta, Nadiya, Santalia, and Bihar—which form a part of the diocesan council. The new machinery has begun to work, and what is now needed is more men to put force into it.

CALCUTTA AND BURDWAN.—Calcutta and Burdwan are among the oldest C.M.S. stations in India, having been founded in 1816-19. The work there has not increased to the same extent as at the stations farther up-country. Burdwan, though it is a very important centre in the midst of a most populous district, is scarcely mentioned in the Report of the Mission. The Indian clergyman in charge, the Rev. L. M. Dey, laments the absence of Christian fellowship, though he adds that the work in the town is promising. Three Hindu students of the Raj College came to him to read the Bible, one of whom is extraordinarily familiar with it, and the Persian professor of the college was reading with the missionary eight hours a week.

Calcutta

St. Paul's College, Calcutta, has added another storey to its hostel building. Both the college and St. Paul's School for Christian boys and Christ Church School for Christian girls have continued to make progress in numbers and results, and the Garden Reach School for Mohammedan boys is overflowing. Of the educational value of St. Paul's College we have this high testimony in the recently issued report of the Calcutta University Commission :—

> We have studied the working of this college with close attention, and consider that it has achieved in a remarkable degree the aim which it sets before itself. In this respect, indeed, it is a model for other colleges in Bengal; and affords a strong argument in favour of the small college. It has also endeavoured to develop the tutorial method of instruction, the small size of its classes making the substitution of class-work for formal lectures practicable, while every student also receives individual tuition at frequent intervals. St. Paul's College is, in short, a model of what a college can be and can do for its students, on that side of university life which is at present most neglected in Bengal.

The Rev. E. C. Dewick, who is acting principal of St. Paul's College, has been appointed a fellow of the Calcutta University within three months of reaching India. He found his students as a whole very friendly and interested in Christianity, but not disposed to come to any decision. The present centre of interest was nationalism, whether outside the church or within it. In the suburb of Cossipore the divinity college sent out five students last year, four being ordained. Two S.P.G. students are in training there for deacon's orders. The Rev. J. P. N. Biswas was teaching four of the students Bengali violin playing and singing, and this Indian music was of much help in public preaching. Mr. Biswas has also been holding Children's Special Service Missions in Calcutta and elsewhere. He tells us that the Scripture Union has 2000 members in Bengal. At Howrah the upper-class Indians were inclined to attach themselves to the European church and keep away from Bengali services.

Cossipore

Howrah

Nadiya District.—In the Nadiya district the year 1919 has been one of poor crops and great scarcity. The price of rice is double that which was once considered famine rate. A large number of people were having only one meal a day, and instead of being able to maintain their Church they looked to the Church to help them in their distress. A generous response was given to an appeal for these starving people, made by Canon Sandys in the Calcutta Cathedral. The scarcity and high prices make maintenance of the work difficult, as the preachers cannot live upon their pay. The baptism of families or groups of families takes place from time to time. One of the difficulties created by the present village education is illustrated in this Mission. The Bengali wears no head-dress; and boys who have been freed from exposure to the sun during their school life are no longer able to do field work in the sun. This is one reason why they gravitate to town employment of various sorts. The division of duties between Indian and European, under the new church council system, is felt somewhat of a burden by the former, but on the whole there is a tendency to progress.

The medical work at Doyabari (Ranaghat) (C.M.S.), Krishnagar (C.E.Z.M.S.), and Ratnapur (C.E.Z.M.S.), has been recognized by the award of three Kaisar-i-Hind medals. Several assistants trained in the Ranaghat hospital have been placed out for missionary work, and a young Brahman has been baptized. The number of Christians independent of the Mission has been increased by migration from other parts. In the boarding Chupra school at Chupra there are about 100 boys, mostly Christians but including a few Mohammedans, and in the day school there are 200 to 300, mostly non-Christian, boys. During the last four or five years, seven Mohammedan pupils have been baptized with the consent of their parents. Some four or five more are still in school preparing for baptism, while several others wish to be baptized but cannot obtain permission from home. There is also a good deal of keenness among the elder Christian pupils, many of whom have joined a Guild of Christian Service; the members of this spent their Christmas holidays in camp and did evangelistic work among the villages. At one place the visit had a marked effect; several Mohammedan parents and guardians handed over their boys to Mr. J. H. Hickinbotham to be brought up as Christians.

SANTALIA.—In the Santal Country the return of Christians and others who joined the Labour Corps for France is having its effect:—

> More than 1000 Christian men went, and several thousands of non-Christians. Their experiences were no doubt an education to them, though it is difficult to get out of them more than the bare fact that they saw the sea, or felt cold, and had plenty of work and plenty to eat. But now they have come back men may be seen sweltering under a thick service great-coat in the hottest day of May, or tramping the fields with little clothing other than heavy army boots two sizes too large. They have come back—with money too, and being better off, have bought fields. They scorn to work any more as village munshis or schoolmasters on Rs 6 or 8 a month. The days of our one really cheap Mission are waning; men will want more pay.

The return of the missionaries who went with the labour corps has helped to strengthen the work, but the Santal mission has suffered a great loss in the death of Mr. S. J. Jessop. He was on his way home and had arrived at Plymouth, but died from smallpox contracted during the voyage. The Rev. H. R.
Barharwa Holmes, of Barharwa, describes the offerings of the Santal Christians on last New Year's Day. About 800 or 900 people filled the church, and during a processional hymn two violins headed the choir, followed by boys carrying sheaves on their heads, which were presented at the Lord's Table. The offertory took an hour and a half to collect, and the chancel was filled with grain. The offering, which weighed 256 maunds (at 82 lbs.), with 50 maunds of firstfruits, previously collected, made a harvest thanksgiving of over 11 tons. The cash offertory was Rs 48, and the value of the whole would amount to about £85 at current exchange.

BIHAR.—At Bhagalpur the most conspicuous building is the high school, "built by the extraordinary energy and zeal of the Rev. S. K. Tarafadar." The town is thus described: "Bhagalpur is a series of villages; three miles of straggling houses and occasional bazaars brings one to the Champanagar mission compound. Here live Mr. and Mrs. Perfect with their varied work, and Mr. and Mrs. Hewison. There are an orphanage and middle school and dispensary in the compound. Across the road, on the hill of the ancient fort stands the Hindi mission church." It has been very difficult, owing to high prices, to maintain the orphanage with its fifty-four boys. It has supplied nearly all the Christian workers of the station besides sending out many as teachers elsewhere, or to government railway works. The leading Hindus of the place have started their own orphanage and taken over the children of their faith. Still a Brahman woman recently brought a little boy of a year old to the orphanage, and when asked why she did so, her answer was: "If I keep the child it will die of starvation, and I know that the only people who will truly care for it are the Christians." At Deoghar the Rev. and Mrs. B. Grundy have been grappling with the scarcity and have rescued and fed many little children. The effect upon the bigoted Hindus of the place of this ministry of Christian love has been very marked. The Leper Asylum at Purulia, recently taken over by the C.M.S. from the Lutheran Gossner Mission, is the largest in India; it had 840 inmates at the end of 1919. Two isolated S.P.G. congregations were also taken over by the missionary in charge. Altogether 110 adults and 43 children were baptized from among the lepers in 1919, and 51 men and women who were untainted descendants of lepers and settled near the asylum, were confirmed, as they wished to join the Anglican Church. Eighty-five lepers were confirmed by the new Bishop of Chota Nagpur.

SOUTH INDIA MISSION

Founded: 1814. Sphere: within the Madras Presidency. Dioceses: Madras, Dornakal, Tinnevelly. Bishops: Henry Whitehead (Madras), Vedanayakam Samuel Azariah (Dornakal), Edward Harry Mansfield Waller (Tinnevelly and Madura). Indian clergymen: 102. Foreign clergymen: 16. Other foreign missionaries: 29. Christian adherents: 129,954. (For other statistics see pp. xii–xv.) Principal stations: Madras and Ootacamund and Coonoor; Haidarabad, in the Nizam's dominions; Masulipatam, Bezwada, Ellore, and Khammamett, in the Telugu Country; and Palamcotta, Tinnevelly Town, and Mengnanapuram, in Tinnevelly.

The four sections into which the Society's work in South India is divided indicate the lines of its advance towards embodiment in a full diocesan organization. The work in Madras itself and that in the Nilgiri Hills far to the west may be linked together for C.M.S. purposes as being under the diocesan bishop. The work in the Telugu Country from Masulipatam and inwards, west and north to Dummagudem, is all under the episcopal superintendence of Bishop Azariah, to whom has been committed also the work of the S.P.G. in the Telugu territory; so that here is an embryo diocese (Dornakal) consisting of the Telugu Country, the first under an Indian bishop, which is advancing with well-considered energy towards the ultimate goal of self-government. In Tinnevelly there is a diocese, also including Missions both of C.M.S. and S.P.G., in the former of which the immovable property connected with the pastorates is being made over as a centenary gift, by way of preparation for independent diocesan life. In Travancore there is a diocese less advanced than that of Tinnevelly on the way to self-support, but important from its connexion with the ancient Syrian Church, especially in its reforming section. In these several dioceses the past year has witnessed a very remarkable movement towards the larger unity for which the Church Missionary Society has always prayed and worked, beginning with a conference at Tranquebar to consider union between the United Church of South India (comprising Presbyterians and Congregationalists), the Mar Thoma, or reformed, section of the Syrian Church, and the Anglicans in this area. The draft proposals for this union are the first which have been definitely put forward as a practical scheme of action upon the basis of the "Lambeth Quadrilateral"—Scripture as the rule of faith, the Nicene Creed as the symbol of doctrine, the two sacraments as the basis of worship, and the historic episcopate as the uniting link of organization.

Movement towards unity

Madras

MADRAS AND THE NILGIRIS.—In Madras itself the work has been taken over almost entirely by the Indian Church Council, which links together four Churches with their pastoral, educational, and evangelistic work. Work among Mohammedans in the Harris School, under Canon M. G. Goldsmith, shows 360 names on the roll, almost all of them Moslem lads and many from good families. The demand at public preachings for gospel portions as well as for other Christian books is constant and considerable.

Haidarabad

Plans are being considered for the closely allied though distant work in the Mohammedan centre at Haidarabad to be taken over by the New South Wales branch of the C.M.S. of Australia, with a corresponding committee of its own.

Ootacamund

In the Nilgiris the work comprises the pastorates of Ootacamund and Coonoor together with the Wynaad district, where work among the wild hill tribes and immigrant coolies in the plantations is carried on. Indian Christians contribute about two-thirds of the total expenditure in the Nilgiris, including the support of catechists and of evangelistic work generally, but not of the schools. The pupils are 1500 in number. Those of the Wynaad district number about 800.

TELUGU COUNTRY.—The formation of a Telugu Church Council for the whole of the area will it is hoped contribute much to the consolidation of the work. At Khammamett the pastors belonging to the church council, when told of the Society's financial difficulties, renounced the travelling expenses which had been paid to them, and effected other economies.

Progress in the Telugu Mission

During the year 1919 there were 2660 baptisms in the four districts of the Telugu Mission, of which over 1000 were of adults. The Bezwada and Masulipatam districts show respectively increases of 298 and 204 on the number of baptisms for 1918. All four districts show an increase of catechumens, totalling 1616. The total increase in the number of Christians and inquirers for 1919 is 5728. Sixty-six new village schools were opened during the year, and forty-six new workers were employed in three of the districts. Contributions from the Indian Christians showed an advance of Rs 2893, a most encouraging record in a year of scarcity and high prices. A remarkable feature of the year has been the progress in building school prayer houses and teachers' houses in the villages, an outcome of the vigorous campaign in behalf of the mass movements conducted by Canon Johnson of Manchester. One hundred and eighty of these buildings have been provided.

The indigenous Telugu Missionary Association is taking up an entirely new field of work in the Waranjal district of the Dornakal Diocese. Four men have been selected to go as first missionaries.

The Rev. K. Ganugapati refers to the danger of superficial work among villagers being prepared for baptism. Caste quarrels between sections of outcastes occasionally take place. In one case Mala Christians forbade their Madiga brothers to draw water from their well, but eventually the matter was settled. On the other hand a district judge of Masulipatam, speaking at the diamond jubilee of the Noble College, referred to himself as a Protestant Hindu, and earnestly pleaded the cause of the depressed classes before this audience of educated men. At the evangelistic meetings held by Dr. Eddy and his group of workers in and about Masulipatam, 6340 people were present, and eighteen villages asked for teachers. On the occasion of a baptism of some sixty persons in a village, many of the caste people witnessed the ceremony and hospitably entertained the missionary party during their visit.

Masulipatam

A training school for teachers among the panchamas (outcaste people) is being started at Bezwada, mainly at the cost of Government, the management being entirely in the hands of C.M.S. At the Sharkey Training School at Masulipatam eighteen out of twenty students passed the diploma examination. The school had forty-five students and eighty-five children, exclusive of day scholars.

Bezwada

TINNEVELLY.—The C.M.S. area in Tinnevelly is divided between two church councils, the southern and the northern, of which the latter is the less advanced. While the desire for self-government is strongly expressed in the Tinnevelly Church there is less bitterness about it than in the north of India. The foreign missionary

Desire for self-government

staff is gradually vanishing, and the councils are giving opportunities to Indian leaders of ability to come forward. It is felt that the situation is not without risk, as pastors and teachers in villages need more help from outside than they are getting, in order to maintain their spiritual level, and still more to achieve progress. Although the Church is a large one, as missionary Churches in India go, yet many of the Shanar (or Nadar) caste, from which the bulk of the Christians have come, are still outside, and the number who have come in from higher castes is very small, as is the growth of the Church by adult baptism at present. Of 17,000 children in C.M.S. village schools 10,000 are non-Christian.

Tinnevelly Town

A new board composed of Indians and foreigners was formed to control and maintain the college in Tinnevelly Town. It is reported to be working "with the ease and regularity of a well-oiled machine. . . . . There is the utmost goodwill and co-operation, as well as strong discussion."

Palamcotta

Miss M. L. Pawson writes of the training class at Sarah Tucker College at Palamcotta that "the training staff of masters and mistresses are most keen over their work and in getting each student to respond to the call of God, to win their pupils, and to train them for God." Of thirty-nine all but one passed the government examination and were appointed to posts before they left the school. At the baptism of a pupil at one of the branch schools, who was a Brahman, the Brahman children of the mission school came to the church, sitting side by side with the Christian children of low-caste origin. These little ones know more about the Bible than many Christians, though they had never been in a Christian church before. The blind schools at Palamcotta are being carried on by Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Speight. Mr. Speight lost his sight in the war, and has been trained at St. Dunstan's. Besides reading and writing by Braille, the children learn various handicrafts, and, at the time of writing, they were completing an order in cotton-weaving for the municipal hospital, the order having been placed on the merits of previous work. Seven girls and five boys were confirmed in 1919. The Rev. G. T. Selwyn, of the training school, has had eleven students living with him for a longer or shorter time before and after baptism. He writes:—

> One of these boys, a convert from the Brahman community, aged 20, is now reading in the Christian College, Madras. He is studying for his B.A. in philosophy. In the junior B.A. class, he stood first in the scripture examination, first in logic, and second in English. He has been awarded an open scholarship of Rs 120 for this year, and his professors are offering him a tutorship for next year, which will enable him to continue reading for his M.A., independently of my help. He went through a terrible time of trial after he confessed Christ openly, but with God's help has come out refined as silver from the fire. . . . Another is working in the evangelistic itinerating band, and although just 22 years of age is one of the most successful personal workers I know. His younger brother too was brought to Christ, and after great ordeals is studying in the C. M. College, Tinnevelly, and is influencing his fellows for Christ.

Women converts in Hindu homes

Not long ago Bishop Waller confirmed in a country town some twenty women of the Nadar caste who had been baptized, but continued to live (an almost unheard of thing) in their own homes. When the husband of one of them was baptized a great persecution broke out. Some were dragged to a temple and smeared with ashes. All were confined to their houses and cut off from Christian fellowship, but they remained steadfast. Miss E. D. Langdale-Smith reports that at an out-station school near Palamcotta two boys of 14 and 15, belonging to the caste which burns incense in the temples, had been baptized, being the first from their community. The mission has suffered a great loss in the death of Mr. E. Keyworth, a faithful evangelist of great influence among the people.

TRAVANCORE AND COCHIN MISSION

Founded: 1816. Sphere: within the States of Travancore and Cochin. Diocese: Travancore and Cochin. Bishop: Charles Hope Gill. Indian clergymen: 32. Foreign clergymen: 7. Other foreign missionaries: 12. Christian adherents: 60,364. (For other statistics see pp. xii–xv.) Principal stations: Kottayam, Pallam, Tiruwella, Allepie, Alwaye Itinerancy, Trichur, and Kunnankulam.

Death of Rev. J. H. Osmaston

THE Travancore Mission deeply mourns the death by drowning of the Rev. J. H. Osmaston, a missionary who was in intimate touch with the people, thoroughly conversant with their language, and at home both with high and low. His last annual letter tells how the Alwaye district in which he itinerated is almost mature for inclusion in the church council scheme. He was urgent for the evangelization of the Muthuwan tribe of aborigines, who dwell among the wooded hills of Travancore, before they should be further deteriorated by contact with the Hindus of the plains. The Forest Department of the Travancore State has permitted the work of Christian evangelists among them. Mr. Osmaston recorded two painful lapses of converts whom he gained, and noted how the Hindus had been led to devise a rite of reconciliation to Hinduism for lapsed Hindus, less objectionable than the former expiation.

Summer schools for teachers among the mass movements have been helpful to them, among other ways, by revealing and combating the survival of heathen practices among Christians. The progress made by these is shown in the case of a convert from among the Madigas (leather workers), who has gained the B.A. degree.

Pastoral work

The heresy promoted by Poyikayil Johanan is computed to have entangled some 10,000 people. His appeal was to the desire for social uplift, and he claimed to be the inspired revealer of a new dispensation. It appears that the heresy is now on the wane, as many of the people find that they are following a false leader who makes continually increasing demands on them for money. At Tiruwella the visit of Dr. and Mrs. Sherwood Eddy began with a clergy conference in which Anglican and Mar Thoma Syrians to the number of seventy took part, including the suffragan metropolitan of the Mar Thoma Church. The only regret was that these services could not conclude with a united communion. The great convention at Marammamu, visited by some 30,000 people, principally Syrian Christians, was a time of awakening and strengthening. It was addressed not only by Dr. Eddy but also by Syrian brethren and by Sadhu Sundar Singh, and much work was done for Christian women. As a result of the special efforts made we read "that a greater participation in evangelistic work was observable. If the response did not seem commensurate to the stimulus, as to many it did not, national or racial characteristics are to be borne in mind. Malabar is rather a lethargic land. 'Gospel Week,' which was purposely synchronized with the annual Hindu holiday season of Onam, was actively utilized for evangelization by probably the majority of the congregations in the diocese, and the co-operation of Syrian Christian friends was a great source of pleasure to our people as well as increasing the number of the workers."

Evangelism

From Mavelikara Miss L. A. Davis reports the dedication of a new church on the borders of the forest near the Western Ghats. The forest tribes in the neighbourhood are beginning to be touched, as well as the coolies on the plantations. The women are evangelizing among their fellows even more than the men. One of the Christian schoolmasters, half of whose hundred scholars are Hindus, is said to have the entire confidence of the parents of Hindu children, and is a real missionary in the neighbourhood.

Educational work

In the Buchanan Girls' School at Pallam the children partially support a child in an African mission school; they also have their own Gleaners' Union and Scripture Union. At the Kottayam Girls' School there are 126 Anglicans, 59 Mar Thoma Syrians, 87 Jacobite Syrians, 2 Romanists, and 39 Hindus; all live and work in perfect harmony. There is a common missionary union, from which contributions are sent to the National Missionary Society. Some of the girls from the highest form go on to the Women's Christian College at Madras or the medical school at Trivandrum. In the senior divinity class at the Cambridge Nicholson Institution at Kottayam there were eleven Travancore Anglicans, five Ceylonese, and one Mar Thoma student. Three candidates were ordained, one the first Hill Arrian to receive orders.

The total of baptized Christians in the Mission is 57,478. Owing partly to the ravages of influenza and famine this is a decrease of 575 on last year. There has also been a decrease in the number of adult baptisms and admissions to the catechumenate, partly through the influence of sectarian and heretical teachers.

CEYLON MISSION

[Founded: 1818. Sphere: within Ceylon. Diocese: Colombo. Bishop: Ernest Arthur Copleston. Ceylonese clergymen: 31. Foreign clergymen: 14. Other foreign missionaries: 35. Christian adherents: 15,098. (For other statistics see pp. xii–xv.) Principal stations: Colombo, Cotta, Baddegama, Kandy, Nellore, Jaffna, Copay, and in the Tamil Coolie Mission and the Kandian Singhalese Itinerancy.

THE work in Ceylon falls into two principal sections, namely, that among the Singhalese population of the middle and south of the island, and that among the Tamil population of the northern plain. The Tamil element is also very largely represented among the plantations in the central hill country where the Tamil Coolie Mission is at work. Of the work in Ceylon as a whole the Rev. A. E. Dibben writes: "As secretary and treasurer of the C.M.S. Patronage Board I have taken a special interest in the gradual process of handing over work and responsibility to our Singhalese brethren. In all except a very few cases the steps that have been taken in this direction have proved a success."

Tamil Coolie Mission

In the Tamil Coolie Mission the work is impeded by moral irregularities in marriage, to which people who have been brought away from their homes are naturally more prone than others and are made more liable by the lack of facilities for the celebration of marriage. A new obstacle to the work is the abolition of Sunday as an off-day, which renders it more difficult for Christian coolies to come to worship. From Nuwera Eliya the Rev. A. K. Finnimore writes that the Tamil Christians are contributing more than the cost of their pastoral work, which amounts to Rs 18,000. Several of the keen younger men are serving as voluntary evangelists. The Kelani Valley pastorate, some 2000 square miles in area, is under the charge of the Rev. J. V. Yorke, and shows a very enterprising spirit. Forty-nine adults were baptized in 1919, almost all of whom were attracted to Christianity through the influence of Christians in their neighbourhood. A vigorous effort to enlist voluntary workers met with gratifying results. On one tea estate these workers carried on a series of meetings and visits among the people, and in the course of a few months forty people were baptized, some of them being leading Hindus. Christians of the educated classes are taking an interest in work among their poorer brethren.

Other evangelization

Women's work in Ceylon is touching Mohammedans. Miss A. Ledward writes from Colombo that there is less opposition than before, and a former convert who was baptized some years ago is now a trained nurse. The first convert from among those who had been ministered to in jail was baptized after giving evidence of true repentance. At Kandy, Miss E. J. Howes records that Mohammedans were helped by Christians at the time of the rice scarcity and that there was a friendly feeling in spite of the Caliphate agitation.

It seems that the mass movement in India is beginning to affect the Hindus in Ceylon; a few of the outcastes have expressed a wish for baptism at Colombo. From the Tamil pastor at Kandy we learn that on one estate there were ten adults who were preparing for baptism.

Education

Of the work of education in the northern district the Rev. K. C. McPherson writes that of late years education in Ceylon has grown apace under the vitalizing enthusiasm of a most able and brilliant director. New requirements are being laid down and the level of efficiency is being raised. This of course demands progress in our work, the only alternative being decay. He feels that St. John's College, Jaffna, is in a critical situation. The conscience clause appears definitely to be giving trouble in Ceylon. Miss A. Higgens of Colombo writes: "The Government's late regulations with regard to religious teaching in all the vernacular schools in the island have come as a great shock." She adds: "These schools are a means of leavening the masses with gospel truth and morality, which cannot be done in any other way"; and she records that fifteen or sixteen Christians who had passed through one school received in it their first drawings towards Christianity as boys and girls. At Trinity College, Kandy, Mr. A. C. Houlder writes: "I am at present preparing two boys of my former dormitory for baptism, another was baptized during my absence, a fourth last week, and there are others who will certainly make the decisive step before long." An offshoot of the school has been started in the Campbell Memorial Institution, in memory of the late Captain N. P. Campbell, who worked at Trinity College for six years. It is intended to be something corresponding to the settlements in England, there being a night school for lads, with at present thirty-five, who are taught scouting and games as well as book learning. The work is carried on largely by boys of the Trinity College union for social service. In June, 1919, when the rice shortage was at its height, the work of rationing the town from available supplies fell mainly upon Trinity College boys. Buddhists and Christians worked together and good fellowship was promoted between religions and races. The colony work at Peradeniya is prospering. In March last there were sixty-five students in residence. The co-operation with the Wesleyan Mission is happy and fruitful. Cordiality between different races has also been helped forward. Indian tunes are sung, Singhalese art is cultivated, eastern customs observed as far as possible. Co-education is carried on as far as lectures are concerned. The education includes training in first aid, and agricultural and industrial work.

Population

ACCORDING to the latest Year Book of China the population of China proper is reckoned at 304 millions, and that of Manchuria and other dependencies at 26 millions, making for the whole republic 330 millions. The total Christian population is returned as 2,468,307, of whom 1,957,165 are Roman Catholic, and 511,142 Protestant (including 51,843 Anglicans). Before the war there was a small Russian Orthodox Mission in Peking.

The condition of the country at large has hardly improved. Military strife between north and south continues, mitigated yet prolonged by lack of warlike decision on both sides. The cultivation of opium is reported to be on the increase. The Society for the Suppression of the Opium Trade states that the Indian Government are still producing great quantities of the drug, a good deal of which finds its way into China. The President of the Republic in November, 1919, sent a personal message to a meeting of the International Anti-Opium Association, held at Kaifeng, in which he insisted that legal enactments must remain comparatively ineffectual unless well-known and influential leaders of society should protest by word and example. In fact he asked them to give a lead to Government, the weakness of which is thus illustrated. One of the most sinister features of the situation is the news that American brewers have bought land for a great brewery plant in Nanking, and are trying to persuade the Chinese authorities that their treasury difficulties can be favourably solved by a plentiful excise revenue. Public drunkenness is said to be largely on the increase. The effect on China of the return of labour battalions has yet to be tested. They are bringing both good and evil with them. Students' strikes have been frequent and widespread, and while there are some cheering features about them, they are attended by some real dangers.

Opium

Co-operation

The co-operation of Protestant Missions in China will be greatly promoted by the erection of a central building for their head-quarters in Shanghai, for which it is stated that the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church of the U.S.A. has received a promise of £30,000. Among other co-operative measures the China Continuation Committee have formed a Central Christian Literature Council consisting of members of the larger missionary societies in the land. Following upon the union of the branches of the Anglican Church, the Churches in China of the American, Canadian, and New Zealand Presbyterian Missions, the London Missionary Society, the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, and the United Brethren, have combined to form a Church, for which has been chosen the name of "Chung Wu Ki Tuk Kaau Ooi," which means, "The Church of Christ in China."

The "China for Christ" movement

At a conference recently held in Shanghai more than a hundred missionaries and Chinese Christians gathered from all over China and launched a "China for Christ" movement. The aim of the movement is to develop the spiritual life and missionary zeal of the Churches, and to take advantage of the new awakening in China to press upon the people the power of the Gospel to supply their needs. Dr. Cheng Ching-Yi, secretary of the China Continuation Committee, was elected secretary of the movement. He was educated at the L.M.S. School in Peking, and was a leader in the movement which secured inclusion in the national constitution of an article guaranteeing religious liberty to the people of China.

A promising development

In September, 1918, a high school for girls, established by Miss Tseng, a great granddaughter of Tseng Wen-Chang, Hunan's greatest statesman, was formally opened at Changsha. Miss Tseng, who is a B.Sc. with honours of London University, is a Christian, and the new school is to be conducted on Christian lines. It will be remembered that Miss Tseng was brought to Christ through Miss Vaughan of Hangchow, and that she studied in England at Westfield College, Hampstead. This enterprise of a Christian school for Chinese girls of the highest class with a Chinese lady as principal and an Englishwoman, formerly a C.M.S. missionary, as her helper, is full of promise for the future of the Chinese Church.

SOUTH CHINA MISSION

Founded: 1862. Sphere: within Hong Kong and the provinces of Kwangtung, Kwangsi, and Yunnan. Diocese: Victoria (Hong Kong). Bishop: Charles Ridley Duppuy. Chinese clergymen: 11. Foreign clergymen: 13. Other foreign missionaries: 34. Christian adherents: 3611. (For other statistics see pp. xii–xv.) Principal stations: Victoria (Hong Kong); Kowloon, Canton, Pakhoi, and Limchow, in Kwangtung; Nanning, in Kwangsi; and Yunnan City, in Yunnan.

THE stations belonging to this region form three groups; the first group includes those on or near the South China Sea coast, of which Hong Kong is the oldest and Canton the most populous centre; next there is the group connected with the seaport of Pakhoi on the Gulf of Tongking, including Limchow and Nanning, with the outlying post of Yunnan. Finally there is the group belonging to the Kwangsi and Hunan Diocese north of the great West River, with Kweilin in the province of Kwangsi, and Yungchow and other stations in Hunan. The last of these groups is of course included in the Kwangsi and Hunan Mission.

Hong Kong

HONG KONG.—The work in Southern China is specially marked by activity in hospitals and schools, though it is by no means without ordinary evangelistic work. In Hong Kong we have, first, St. Stephen's College, whence the Rev. W. H. Hewitt writes that he hears of increasing numbers of old boys who have decided for Christ after leaving school or college. St. John's Hostel gives accommodation to students of the school who go on to the university. The principal says that during the year five of the students have been baptized, one of them on his death-bed at Singapore; another had to give up his university course in consequence of having become a Christian, his father being unwilling to do more than start him in business life. The students show willingness to assist in outside Christian work. The number in residence during the year was about forty, the Christians among them being ten, more or less, including one Roman Catholic. Miss A. M. Pitts writes that it is cheering to hear how young Christian students are reaching out to distant parts of their own land and trying to win souls, bringing thereby a reflex blessing on the whole Church.

KWANGTUNG PROVINCE.—In the Canton district, the magistrate at Taileung invited the missionary to hold evangelistic services for the prisoners. The magistrate himself is not a Christian, but his young brother is a scholar in St. Paul's School, Hong Kong, and had written to him suggesting that this would do the convicts good. There are more than 600 of them in the jail. Self-support is not invariably a token of Christian character and morality. In the village of Uchau there is a substantial modern school, built by a Chinese Christian who has gained wealth in Hong Kong but is now under discipline. The Rev. C. I. Blanchett hopes that when this convert has recovered himself he may support a teacher in the school that he has built. At Sanhing people crowded the gospel hall to listen, but most of them refused to sit down lest they should be regarded as Christian. The pastorates have been moved by the reports of the missionary work of the Church of China and all of them are supporting it. Mr. Blanchett recently sent up $5350 to the treasurer at Shanghai. A new edition of 3000 copies of the Chinese Prayer Book was being printed. The increase of wealth is illustrated by the fact that the small coin known as "cash" (10=1 cent) is being melted down, and tradespeople "talk price" in nothing smaller than cents. St. Hilda's Girls' School in Canton is only three years old, but has already added to the primary a secondary department, giving a high-grade Chinese and English education. It contains 150 pupils ranging from 3 to 26 years of age, and of these 110 are boarders. The rapid increase of scholars has caused difficulties in accommodation. A former Chinese mortuary has been secured and classes are taking the place of coffins in the cells of this building. The elder girls have been going out in couples on Sunday afternoons to visit the homes of non-Christian people; some of them also carry on village Sunday schools. Several of the new pupils have come from a considerable distance for the sake of the higher education that is offered. The entire course comprises eleven years in classical Chinese and thirteen in English, the two highest classes being entirely for English. "An Englishman in the Customs, who is greatly indebted to C.M.S. for spiritual help, is showing his gratitude by undertaking the music pupils and senior singing class. The pupils are collecting among their friends towards the erection on the compound of a new building of four storeys, capable of seating 800 pupils, and of boarding between 500 and 600. Perhaps our vision is great but the power of our God is greater, and it is the things that have never been done before that He is asking us to do." Miss E. G. George says that during itinerations in the district round Canton she has come across several cases of British women married to Chinese. "In most cases they find that they are secondary wives and are looked upon like we are, as foreign devil-women; also they have a mother-in-law who is a regular autocrat in the home."

Pakhoi

From Pakhoi Miss G. E. Dunk writes about women's work: "During the past year eight have been added to our number by holy baptism, and thirteen were confirmed. Of those baptized six were pupils from the schools; of those confirmed, the same number." Miss Dunk deplores that better touch has not been maintained with the girls who have passed from the school. She is trying by endeavour bands and a girls' guild to remedy the omission. The number of elder girls actually at work as Sunday-school teachers and the like is on the increase, and so is the number of pupils. The fees now charged for each boarder cover the boarding expenses and pay the salaries of two visiting masters. They are to be raised next year so as to defray other charges. The Leper Hospital at Pakhoi has forty-five women, among whom five were being prepared for baptism. The Rev. C. N. R. Mackenzie devoted a good deal of time to the superintendence of the mission press, as well as other miscellaneous duties, and lamented the absence of leisure for direct evangelization. The candidates for baptism were dealt with principally by the Rev. Ha Po-Wan, the Chinese pastor in charge of St. Luke's Church, whom Mr. Mackenzie was assisting in his pastoral charge besides conducting English services in the church. Mr. Ha Po-Wan has recently baptized a man who heard the Gospel ten years before in the hospital and was received as a catechumen; meanwhile he suffered from persecution, robbery, and domestic troubles, but these only increased his desire to follow Christ fully, and he once more made the long journey to Pakhoi for baptism, "going back to his village radiantly happy, and followed by the prayers of his fellow-Christians." In another case a boy from one of the mission schools brought home a gospel to his mother, whose interest was thereby aroused; she went to the preaching hall and was eventually baptized. Self-support is backward, but the Chinese pastor's work is telling in a better direction.

YUNNAN PROVINCE.—The medical work at Yunnan has hitherto been carried on in temporary premises, but a permanent building has now been acquired, and the living Church is growing ; the church building will seat 200 or more and the people are enthusiastic in furnishing it, and have promised more than half of the pastor's monthly pay of $100. The pastor-elect is a graduate of Soochow University and of Latimer College, Vancouver. As the result of a gathering at a summer resort in 1918 presided over by Miss Katie Woo, principal of St. Paul's Girls' School in Hong Kong, an effort has been set on foot to investigate the needs of the province of Yunnan, and three well-known Chinese pastors, together with three Chinese Christian ladies, have been prospecting, with the hope that a home mission of the Chinese Church may be established in this needy province, with church, school, and hospital. KWANGSI AND HUNAN MISSION

Founded: 1899. Sphere: within the provinces of Kwangsi and Hunan. Diocese: Kwangsi and Hunan. Bishop: William Banister. Chinese clergymen: 4. Foreign clergymen: 7. Other foreign missionaries: 9. Christian adherents: 862. (For other statistics see pp. xii–xv.) Principal stations: Kweilin, in Kwangsi; and Yungchow, Hengchow, and Siangtan, in Hunan.

HUNAN PROVINCE.—At Hengchow, Archdeacon J. Holden reports considerable difficulties in schools, owing to political agitation among students and schoolboys. The enforcement of discipline has been a problem. There were riots in the city, and for a time students and schoolboys published a daily newspaper. The editor was a youth who had been expelled from the C.M.S. school a few months before for sundry delinquencies ; nevertheless, Archdeacon Holden writes : " In spite of the wrong-headedness of many of their views and methods, it is difficult not to admire the obvious sincerity of some at least of these young men, and the situation has provided excellent opportunities of holding up before them the highest ideals of citizenship and patriotism. A sectional feeling between groups of boys coming from different districts was very bitter and caused disturbances. Eventually a party among the boys demanded the expulsion of certain students as a condition of their remaining. They were told to leave, and thereupon opened a school of their own to be run on model lines in which all teachers and students were to be on equal terms." The venture soon broke down and the best of the recreants came asking for forgiveness and re-admission. The school did well in the public examination, and has since filled up. Archdeacon Holden is having classes for the teaching of the new phonetic script both to literates and illiterates with satisfactory results. Evangelistic work has gone on steadily in a preaching hall. Hengchow

KWANGSI PROVINCE.—From the Rev. J. R. Wilson and Miss G. Santler of Kweilin we hear that great blessing resulted from special services held by Mr. Goforth, of the Christian Missionary Alliance, Kweilin

At one out-station twenty men were baptized in one month, and the spiritual life of the Chinese workers was greatly revived. A Christian dispenser who had planned to start a lucrative private practice of his own decided to remain on in the mission dispensary with a much smaller remuneration, so that he might be able to continue preaching the Gospel. Mr. Wilson, who speaks of Mr. Goforth's mission as the greatest blessing of his own life, has been teaching the new phonetic script, and the reading of Scripture is thereby much increased. A visit to the mountain tribes north of Kweilin was welcomed by them, and they show great readiness to receive the Gospel.

FUKIEN MISSION

Founded: 1880. Sphere: within the province of Fukien. Diocese: Fukien. Bishop: John Hind. Chinese clergymen: 27. Foreign clergymen: 19. Other foreign missionaries: 83. Christian adherents: 18,910. (For other statistics see pp. xii–xv.) Principal stations: Foochow, Lienkong, Ningteh, Funing, Futsing, Hinghwa, Kutien, and Kienning.

A disturbed year

THE conditions of the province have been troublous and disturbed during the past year, though missionaries generally have been respected. At Futsing in October, 1919, the civil mandarin asked permission for his wife and family to be kept overnight in one of the mission compounds until he could send them on to Foochow. Fighting between the Northerners and Southerners went on for some time. Many of the wounded were treated in mission hospitals, and there was full opportunity for giving them the gospel message of peace and goodwill. Most of the brigands eventually gave in their adhesion to Government, on condition of receiving free pardon and liberal pay as police. The agitation that was called forth by concessions made to Japan in Shantung affected missionary work to some extent. The commercial boycott of Japanese goods has increased the demand for industrial education, the object of course being to enable the Chinese themselves to produce what they had hitherto imported.

School strikes

The school strikes which spread so widely throughout the empire were felt at Foochow during April and May, 1919, and the disorder which they produced in the middle school made it necessary to close it for a time. Miss A. M. Wolfe writes that many girls' schools joined in the students' strike, but her school went on quietly throughout. From Miss J. Bushell we hear that the hostile relations between North and South China have tended to make the younger generation restless and unhappy; they feel a desire to help their country to assert herself as against Japan and the outside world generally, but at the same time they are conscious that the corruption of public life and factions in the nation render them impotent to do so.

There was a terrible epidemic of cholera in the summer at Foochow, which led to a revival of the idol processions. On of these cost $6000, but less reverence was shown to the objects of worship than of old. Revival of idol processions

Bishop Hind made his first tour of the diocese last year and confirmed 992 persons, being an average of sixteen from each organized Church. He was encouraged by the fact that at Hinghwa a new school building had been provided mainly by the efforts of Chinese Christians themselves. On the other hand he writes of a schism which has recently taken place. "Eleven of our catechists have left and have established an independent Church, affiliated to the independent Church whose head-quarters is in Shanghai." The Bishop also speaks of a deplorably small number of pastors and a low pastoral ideal, as well as a high degree of illiteracy. Compared with other mission fields the Bishop gauges by a high standard. Inquiry as to the literacy (i.e. ability to read the Bible in colloquial character or in romanized or any other kind of script) of the Chinese Christians has shown that in the diocese of Fukien sixty per cent. of the baptized constituency over 20 years of age can read, and more than forty-five per cent. of the total constituency above 20 years of age, including catechumens and other adherents. The Bishop was promoting efforts to provide an easy phonetic script for the Fukien dialect, which he hopes will greatly help in spreading education. He was also compiling a manual for the guidance of pastors, and had started a pocket churchman's almanac in Chinese. It was hoped that a small missionary newspaper might soon be set on foot. The Bishop believes that the simultaneous diocesan mission in September, 1919, was a time of very real progress and will continue to tell. Literacy of Chinese Christians

From Kutien the Rev. B. G. Parsons writes that the Church in that district is practically self-governing and more than half self-supporting. It now has four Chinese clergy, having parted with one who has gone to a more needy district. Of the eighteen catechists, half are supported by the Chinese Church, but it ought to supply a good many more. Out of the twenty-six primary boys' schools in the district six are entirely self-supporting, and the remainder draw half their cost from the Society. The fees are being raised as education is more valued—a great contrast to an earlier condition of things when children had to be rewarded for going to school. Self-support

The Rev. A. W. R. Norton has as his chief work evangelism among the educated classes, and receives and pays many formal visits in the due fashion of Chinese etiquette. He has a small class of men who come to him for Bible study, or in some cases to prepare for baptism. There are also short preaching services at which literature is sold and lent. A good deal of correspondence is carried on with persons who have Evangelizing the educated classes become interested. Among Mr. Norton's visitors 76 belonged to the Civil Service, 36 to the Army, 126 to the teaching profession, 15 were lawyers, 1 a journalist, 7 merchants, 14 gentry without occupation. A young student just back from university work in Japan came to learn English, and for that purpose began to read the New Testament, a copy of which he has taken with him to Peking, where he hopes to enter state service. Mr. Norton writes: "111 out of 190 whom we have had opportunity of getting in touch with have, we hope, heard enough to know that we preach Christ as the Saviour of men." Some officials of high rank are included in the number, a general and an admiral among them.

Village evangelization

It has been possible to carry on the work of village evangelization, even by women missionaries, though Miss E. Mort, for instance, writes from Kengtao that she has been unable to go to distant villages owing to prohibition by the Consul. At Nangdong the Rev. J. Curtis baptized seventy-six people in January, and in the next village Christians put up a house for their catechist and one for prayer meetings at their own charges. From Chungan, Miss E. J. Harrison reports that there is a growing desire to hear the Gospel, and the colporteur has been enabled to circulate the Scriptures and literature as well as to preach. The schools however are immature and the candidates for confirmation are nearly all illiterate, though some learned to read after they had been baptized. There has been a real blessing on the work of the Chinese pastor, in answer to the prayers of his supporters at home. From Hinghwa the Rev. W. H. Maddock writes that in villages where a congregation is formed a leader is elected who does the work without remuneration. He gets the Christians together and helps to conduct services and teach them. An adult Sunday school before service is found to be useful. The station of Doshun, near Foochow, had to be temporarily closed in May, 1919.

Position of women in the Church

The elevation of the position of women through Christianity is shown by repeated mention of their inclusion in the church councils. At Kengtao, at the time of the Bishop's visit, the women who for the first time had been elected to the vestry were presented to him. At the diocesan synod in February it was decided that women should be eligible as members of the pastorate committees and church councils, but not of the synod. At the time of the diocesan mission, special meetings for women were held in the hospital. On the other hand, we learn that in Foochow itself there was a difficulty as to the employment in mission work of women whose husbands have taken second wives. Some of these are the legitimate first wives of men, whether heathen or so-called Christians, who have deliberately, and, so far as appears, from no fault of the first wife, taken a second wife. There was much discussion as to whether such women of good Christian character might be employed by the Church or not. The question is felt to be a difficult one. At Hinghwa the women's school has gone on well. A new building was ready for occupation in February and has twenty-six pupils. Seven of the pupils were baptized and four made catechumens during the year. At the time of the fighting which went on in and around the city, meetings were daily held for Christian women with an attendance of over sixty, and the women were not afraid to walk to and fro despite the danger from fighting. The Mothers' Union has over forty communicant members.

Education

Under the C.M.S. and C.E.Z.M.S. in this province there are eighty-six day schools for boys and sixty for girls. The total number of pupils is 3432, of teachers 169. The book depot adjoining the C.M.S. office at Foochow sold in one year 690 Bibles, 570 New Testaments, and 4203 gospels in five different languages. Widespread free distribution of tracts militates against sales. The Sunday school is a specially notable feature in this Mission. Ningteh has five Sunday-school centres. From Kienyang, Miss F. L. Coleman reports that Sunday-school work in the city is very encouraging. The average attendance is fifty, and the school gives her touch with the parents, to whom the children repeat their lessons. From Lienkong, Miss S. S. Newton writes that the Christian schoolgirls are conducting a Sunday school entirely by themselves.

Girls' schools

The work of girls' schools is generally speaking well developed, but the women's normal school at Foochow had to be closed when Miss L. B. Craig took furlough, and the students whose course was not complete had to be sent elsewhere. Some sixty ex-pupils are now employed as teachers in mission schools throughout the province. Thus an important part of the educational scheme of the Mission, without which women leaders for the growing Churches cannot be provided, is out of gear through lack of workers. The girls' boarding school at Kengtao has been re-started with forty girls by Miss F. E. Oatway, after two years' intermission. Miss Oatway has met many former pupils, who have been bearing their Christian witness in isolated and difficult surroundings. Miss Newton writes from Lienkong that the people are putting an increasing value on education for girls. They are ready to pay $4 fees in place of $3.

Boys' schools

Trinity College at Foochow consists of three departments: the primary vernacular, the middle normal, and the Anglo-Chinese. The last named department has eleven students who are destined to serve in district schools. Mrs. W. Conlin, the wife of the principal, has made a successful innovation as a woman teacher of boys in the Anglo-Chinese department. At Funing the Rev. J. Curtis writes that he has started an Anglo-Chinese department in which the students are ready to pay a considerable fee which covers expenses,

Hospitals

The medical work sometimes has to compete at a disadvantage with the old-fashioned treatment. Miss K. Andrews writes from Futsing regarding the cottage hospital that many women consult mediums or witches before going to hospital, and, if they receive benefit there, the gratitude goes to the supposed supernatural powers who directed them to the place. Cases of demoniacal possession are not infrequent, especially by what is known as the "fox devil." A repetition of seizures is generally warded off by large doses of bromide. A woman medium who had been treated in this way and had become an inquirer was holding back from definite conversion because of the profitable nature of her occupation, the gains of which apparently reached her, and not, as in the case of the Philippian slave-girl, her masters. At Funing, Miss M. G. Howe tells us, patients think that "worship is part of their cure," and they do not like to be kept in bed when prayers are going on lest their recovery should be retarded. Self-support of the hospitals is progressing. Miss A. L. Leybourn, of Futsing, writes that patients value their treatment more than they did, and fees are being increased. Miss H. E. Baldwin reports from Foochow that the women's hospital has met all its expenses during the year except for a few things which were sent from England. The patients are quite ready to pay for treatment, and those who need operations pay fees ranging from $3 to $40. From Kienning, Archdeacon H. S. Phillips tells us of two Christian doctors who are pillars of the Church. One is Dr. Ngoi, who is not only a good physician but chairman of the local church council, and a leading Christian for thirty years past. In 1917 during an outbreak of influenza two of his sons died. The doctor, knowing that this would be regarded as a sign of divine displeasure, though himself ill, came to the funeral service of the second victim to show his faith in God's love in this bereavement. His eldest son was in France as an interpreter to the Labour Corps, and he bore witness that his escape from temptation during that time was owing to his Christian up-bringing. The other man referred to is Dr. Wang, the son of a catechist, whose help is largely sought by the richer people of the city, so that from his fees the medical mission of which he is a member is largely supported. These are not the only Chinese Christians who are witnessing for Christ through the ministry of healing.

CHEKIANG MISSION

Founded: 1844. Sphere: within the provinces of Kiangsu and Chekiang. Diocese: Chekiang. Bishop: Herbert James Molony. Chinese clergymen: 28. Foreign clergymen: 15. Other foreign missionaries: 54. Christian adherents: 5701. (For other statistics see pp. xii–xv.) Principal stations: Shanghai, in Kiangsu; and Ningpo, Taichow, Shaohing, Hangchow, and Chuki, in Chekiang.

General conditions

In Chekiang, the general conditions have been restless but by no means prohibitive of evangelistic work, though from some places, for instance Ningpo, we hear that the effect has been unfavourable and that baptisms have diminished. As in other provinces the repercussion of the Shantung concessions to Japan has been felt in many directions, and, generally speaking, political prejudice is against a missionary who represents Britain. The Rev. G. W. Coultas, of Hangchow, believes that some Chinese are waiting to join the Christian Church till foreign influence is eliminated. To counter this hindrance missionaries in various places, more especially in girls' schools, as at Chuki, are teaching the students to pray for what their country really needs, and to conduct patriotic leagues on a Christian basis.

Condition of the Church

Adult baptisms during the year have numbered 199; confirmations are about 200 a year. The adherents at the end of 1919 were just over 5700. There are thirteen recognized parishes in the Mission, and the town parishes of Ningpo and Hangchow, besides being self-supporting, send help to country parishes. Congregations generally support the Chinese C.M.S. Mission in Tashih, the Bible and Tract societies, and other objects. Proposals are on foot to regulate the status of English congregations in China in their connexion with the diocese, possibly by the appointing of a special bishop to administer their affairs. From Ningpo and Chuki we hear of trouble caused by the invasion of the Seventh Day Adventists. Bishop Molony tells us that the Chung Hua Sheng Kung Hui, the Anglican Church of China, is still a very foreign thing and that it does not seem to the Chinese so important as the Mission which looms large in foreign workers and money. None the less has the work done by Bishop Sing since his consecration in October, 1918, been most helpful. His pastoral visitation and his wise counsel have both contributed to build up the Church. "Wherever he goes his help is welcomed both by the Chinese workers and the missionaries."

Conversions

Converts at their baptism often show their sincerity by the sacrifice of their most cherished religious emblems. A Buddhist baptized at Saenpo, near Ningpo, gave up to the missionary her prayer mat, worth many dollars of the next world's currency, and her rosary, and burned her idol papers representing the things needed beyond the grave. Twenty other men and women who were baptized did the like, and at Shaohing some converts destroyed at baptism their highly valued kitchen gods as well as their idol money. Bishop Molony reports that interest in the evangelization of Chinese Moslems, aroused by the visit of Dr. Zwemer, is resulting in the provision of literature for workers among them and in greater attention to the 10,000,000 of Mohammedans in China, who are more open than in other lands, though they are not without bigoted zeal for their own faith.

Women and girls

Mrs. H. Castle reports of the girls' school at Hangchow that, while the school is prospering, there is some anxiety as to the preparation of girls for confirmation because of the difficulty which they often experience when married, owing to strong opposition to a Christian life in their own homes. Miss M. E. Gillard on returning to Shaohing after three years' absence was struck by the progress which some of the women had made in ability to read and use their Bible, Prayer Book, and hymn book, and also to guide others who were less advanced. These same women were going out once or twice a week to evangelize their sisters. Miss E. F. Turner at the same place speaks of the remarkable capacity of other adult Chinese women for working hard at the difficult Chinese character, and taking in comparatively advanced teaching. One of these women was the first Bible woman appointed to work in the Chinese C.M.S. Miss J. C. Morris, of Hangchow, finds that the rising generation of Chinese is anxious only for book knowledge as an aid to material success. There is little discipline as between parents and children, nor do the girls understand the necessity of discipline in school. They regard liberty as equivalent to freedom from all control, which makes the work discouraging. A girl who was by way of apologizing for bad behaviour in school ended her letter with the sentence: "Though you are now a teacher and I a pupil, yet in the sight of God we are sisters." A good sentiment, but faulty in application!

Boys' education

From Trinity College, Ningpo, there have gone forth the first Chinese bishop, six Chinese priests, and a Chinese head of a normal school and a middle school. The college printing press is active and has become more effective through a supply of new type. Its influence and its output are likely to be increased by the adoption of the new phonetic script, which is gradually coming into use. The Rev. J. G. Bird found coolies in the Chinese Labour Corps wonderfully quick at learning to read it.

Hospitals

Medical work continues popular at Tunglu. The dispensary is used by all classes, from a chief official wounded in a gambling riot down to street beggars. At Ningpo during the cholera epidemic the gentry of the city opened five temporary hospitals, and when the need for them had passed they presented the instruments and other equipment to the two missionary hospitals. During a cholera epidemic at Hangchow some 40,000 leaflets were distributed which gave both a gospel message and also elementary guidance as to the treatment of cholera patients.

Cultured classes

Miss D. C. Joynt's work at Hangchow among the leisured classes and in government girls' schools has brought her into touch with many people of influence. The late Prime Minister was a close friend, and Miss Joynt is in intimate touch with his household. Familiar fellowship between the aristocrats of the old order and ardent republicans is by no means uncommon. Two ladies of good family who had been Buddhist nuns and vegetarians were desiring baptism. They are principals of a girls' school and allowed their pupils to be instructed in the Gospel. Miss Joynt was invited also to teach in a government school. One of her tasks has been to read and summarize current news for the use of missionaries, and she has translated into Chinese a life of Mary Vaughan and is writing the life of a Chinese woman evangelist.

WESTERN CHINA MISSION

Founded: 1891. Sphere within the province of Szechwan. Diocese: Western China. Bishop: William Wharton Cassels. Foreign clergymen: 19. Other foreign missionaries: 43. Christian adherents: 1509. (For other statistics see pp. xii-xv.) Principal stations: Mienyang, Chungpa, Lungan, Mowchow, Anhsien, Mienchuh, Tehyang, Sintu, and Chungkiang.

Political conditions

THE province of Szechwan has been more peaceful than for some years past. This is ascribed to the rule of General Lu, who controls twenty-seven counties and is generally friendly towards missionaries and the Christian Church. Order is fairly good, though bribery is heavy and the opium trade is unhindered, if not increasing, with the connivance or assistance of the officials. The general attitude towards Christianity is said to be that of "respectful indifference." The country is overrun with soldiery, who occupy public buildings of all sorts and are supported in comfort by the public. There is a greater desire for the benefits of western education, but less readiness on the whole to hear the gospel message.

Social and religious movements

The social aspect of Christianity is appreciated. At Mienyang the Rev. A. A. Phillips was asked to co-operate with the Chinese gentry in the establishment of a social service bureau for which they furnished the funds, and a start in doing this was made both by the missionary and his wife. So far, the movement is an evidence rather of friendly disposition than of actual work. The Rev. E. A. Hamilton tells us of a revival of Buddhism in the district round Sintu. A monastery was constructed with a fish pond, not for food, but for preserving the life of the fish, while in the scarcity that prevailed all around children were starving.

Discipline and worship

Among difficult cases of discipline, there was one of a Christian of good standing whose wife was childless, and who could not understand the objection to following the general Chinese practice of bigamy in such a case. At Mienchuh the Chinese Christians are becoming more alive to the value of Christian festivals, especially that of Easter, which forms a substitute for the Chinese feast of "Pure Brightness," when ancestral graves are worshipped. Ninety-one adults were baptized in the Mission during the year, making a total of 985 baptized Christians. The schools showed an increase of fifty pupils; the number of communicants is about the same as last year. The district church council relieved the C.M.S. of one-eighth of the support of Chinese agents for 1920.

Archdeacon Ku

An evangelistic and pastoral tour by Archdeacon Ku resulted in not a little awakening and blessing. At Sintu for instance he had personal interviews with groups of people among Christians and non-Christians; he addressed select audiences in halls or temples or government schools; also general gatherings of Christians, Mohammedans, Buddhists, and Confucians. His knowledge of the Bible, as well as of non-Christian scriptures, and his way of using both to set forth the gospel message was very effective.

Spiritual life

Conferences of Chinese and foreign representatives of various Churches were held at Chungking and Chengtu. The object was "to call forth and direct the energies of Chinese Christians into more efficient channels of work for the salvation of their countrymen." Among the Christians at Chengtu a good deal of voluntary Christian work has been undertaken and evangelism generally in the whole province is being more carefully organized. It has been linked in a useful manner with the work of education by the annual meeting of the West China Christian Educational Union. During a week addresses were given to the boys of the school at Mienyang, which resulted in conversions of non-Christians and the awakening of Christians to more vigorous life. The addresses given by the two Chinese among the visitors were especially effective. Fifteen boys were being prepared for the catechumenate and one for baptism. The missionary has endeavoured to teach his boys the nature of true patriotism and General Lu has seconded his efforts, with the result that the strike movement has been prevented. Miss V. C. Mannett, of the same place, on the eighth anniversary of the Chinese Republic was enabled to address a meeting of women, held by the General's wife, on true patriotism.

Education

The union university movement is making progress despite difficulties, but it was necessary to close the training college at Paoning for two years on the departure of the principal on furlough. Both at Chengtu and Mienyang, it is said, the new Chinese script sanctioned by the Government is being brought more and more into use.

Medical work

Miss L. Mellodey at Mienchuh has been unable to limit her medical work, though she was unwilling that it should encroach on teaching for women and children. Men have come to her and have refused to go away until medicines were sold to them. The Sunday school has 120 children, chiefly from non-Christian homes, and attendance cards are in great demand. Co-operation with other churches and missions is marked and is very helpful, especially in the matter of education.

Japan

Political and social movements

THE spirit of democracy and the self-consciousness of labour have been much in evidence in Japan. The Parliament has been dissolved on the question of universal suffrage, which in the towns at least has been widely demanded, not without violent demonstrations. Manufacturers and traders have amassed enormous wealth during the war by dint of labour under conditions of time, work, and health, which carry back our thoughts a century in the West. Labour is demanding a mitigation of pressure and a share in gain. In 1914 there were 50 strikes in Japan, shared by 7904 men; in 1918 the numbers were 417 and 66,457. Since the Revolution Japan has shown herself powerful, progressive, united, autocratic, and pagan. Will she be able to maintain a steady development under the stress of disruptive forces from within? Much will depend upon her religious transformation.

Attitude towards Christianity

The attitude towards Christianity, in Japan as elsewhere, is varied. Self-satisfaction is general, and so far as instruction and help gained from the West is remembered it is coupled with reminiscences that neither western governments nor western merchants made much of religion as a factor in their doings. But Japanese statesmen feel the need of religious ideals as a vitalizing force in the national life. They are not as yet eager to welcome Christianity; but to some extent they will give it a place as a useful social force side by side with Shinto and Buddhism. The cult of the Emperor as personifying the national life is still fostered in schools and navy and army. Something like a spiritual revival in the Shinto religion is reported by Miss H. J. Worthington, who writes that a sect near Kobe has a kind of revival meetings at which the worshippers draw into a circle round a lighted stick of incense and confess their sins, after which they are exhorted by the priest. Occasionally teachers promote Shinto or Buddhist worship among their scholars and warn them against Christianity as anti-social. It is said that Christian recruits have been told by their officers to put away Christian books and observe Shinto rites. Sadhu Sundar Singh, the Indian Christian friar, records a sombre impression of his visit to Japan, where he lectured to large audiences:—

> Japan has plunged herself in the soul-killing floods of western materialism. Her eyes are filled with visions of material greatness. She is in the fury of making money and has no ears for the Word of God. The saddest feature of the situation is her indifference to all religions. . . . In my conversations with her leaders I drew attention to the growing immorality in the country. I was not able to get from them even a nominal condemnation of things which would have shocked the moral susceptibilities of an ordinary Indian.

The worst of it is that Japan does not take even Buddhism seriously. Her temples are thronged with tourists and guides more than with devotees.

The observance of Sunday

The influence of Christian custom is manifest in a movement, reported from Tokyo, towards closing business on the first and third Sundays of each month, instead of twice a month irrespective of Sunday. This movement is causing an increase of attendance in churches and mission halls. Christians of substance are not unmindful of the claims of their religion on the mind of the country. Baron Morimura, a wealthy Christian, has given 200,000 yen for the establishment of a chair of Christianity at the Imperial University of Tokyo. Another gift of 50,000 yen to endow a chair for the study of Christian philosophy is reported.

CENTRAL JAPAN MISSION

Founded: 1873. Sphere: within the Main Island of Japan. Dioceses: Osaka and South Tokyo. Bishops: Hugh James Foss and Cecil Henry Boutflower. Japanese clergymen: 16. Foreign clergymen: 11. Other foreign missionaries: 33. Christian adherents: 3245. (For other statistics see pp. xii–xv.) Principal stations: Osaka, Hiroshima, Fukuyama, Hamada, Matsuye, Yonago, and Tokushima, in the diocese of Osaka; and Tokyo, in the diocese of South Tokyo.

Financial drawbacks

THROUGHOUT the Central Japan Mission the finance of Japanese workers has been exceedingly difficult during the year 1919. From all directions missionaries report that preachers and others cannot make ends meet without incurring debt, and therefore cannot give themselves whole-heartedly to their work. Owing to the enormous increase in the wages of ordinary occupations the labourer now receives in many cases much more than the catechist. This is preventing new workers from coming in, while thinning the ranks of the old.

Evangelistic work

Notwithstanding this the work of evangelism has been kept up and many workers have shown determination and self-denial. One of the crown procurators and his wife have been baptized and also several officials in a large copper works near Hiroshima. Newspaper evangelism is there being carried on by the Rev. W. H. M. Walton. Editors at first held back but eventually consented to receive gospel advertisements, and Mr. Walton found an able Japanese colleague. The printed message reaches 2000 homes regularly, and inquiries come from all parts and from many different classes.

Work among Chinese students

The Rev. W. H. Elwin's work among Chinese students in Tokyo continues to progress. It has been hindered by the Shantung controversy, and it happens from time to time that hopeful inquirers graduate and return to China before they are ready for baptism; but, on the other hand, Mr. Elwin is reaping the fruits of work done by his colleagues in China. The Rev. Yü Hyien-Ding, who is working among his Chinese fellow-countrymen in Tokyo, records the baptism during the year of twenty men and one woman. The Chinese Y.M.C.A. in Tokyo has now 1019 members, and every half-year a news letter is issued for their benefit. Three thousand copies of a bi-lingual sheet, "The Church's Call to Action," are issued quarterly. There is also a committee for the promotion of international friendship through the Churches, with an inter-oriental sub-committee which Mr. Elwin hopes will be of use as between Japan, Korea, and China. At Kobe too a Chinese pastor is working among the immigrants. In that city there are some forty Christians, a prosperous night school and a branch of the Y.M.C.A. with more than 100 members, among them several keen business men.

Schools

The Momoyama Boys' Middle School at Osaka is said now to be in a satisfactory condition, having twenty-eight masters and 700 boys all working together harmoniously. The Rev. G. W. Rawlings has to carry on the religious work of the school not only outside its hours but outside its building, in his own study, yet he has baptized six lads during the year. Two more were baptized at the Church of the Resurrection and there are about forty earnest inquirers, several of whom are among the cleverest of the fifth-year boys. The Bishop Poole Girls' School reports a prosperous year. The present fifth-year girls are mostly strong, earnest Christians and have a splendid influence over the juniors.

Literary work

Miss A. C. Bosanquet has been carrying on literary work at Fukagawa for the Christian Literature Society. A new halfpenny paper called "The Light of Love" has a circulation of 8000 copies. The name was suggested by the Christian Japanese manager of a large cotton mill, and the paper is largely read in factories. The children's magazine, "Little Children of Light," printed 6000 copies of its Christmas number.

Social work

Opportunities for social work are opening up by reason of the strong labour movement, but Mr. Walton fears that the Japanese Church generally does not realize the urgency of the call. However Mr. Kegwa, a university graduate and a leading social worker in Japan, has preached Christ in the slums of Kobe. At Hiroshima the Japanese naval authorities asked the Anglican Church to send a representative to a funeral service in memory of the victims of an explosion on board ship, without joining in any pagan rites. In Tokyo slum work is being done by Miss M. Sander and her helpers in districts that had been tried by the Salvationists and left. A Christian Japanese doctor is carrying on a dispensary there, the work at which is telling upon the people. The servant difficulty is felt among the middle classes of Japan as it is in Britain, and women are more occupied at home than they were and less able to attend meetings. At Osaka the Mayor of the city recognized the social work of the lady missionaries by giving them a dinner and a permanent pass on the tramway lines.

Pastoral work

Of the Christians generally one of the missionaries says that they show patience and gentleness but need more courage, joy, and strong moral sense. The power of ancestor worship dies down for a time, but often revives when a member of the family passes away. The organization of the Church by deaneries is reported to be progressing, and self-support among the Churches is increasing; thus in Osaka all the four C.M.S. Churches are financially independent, and in Tokyo St. Paul's is self-supporting, while Emmanuel raises half its pastor's stipend and the youngest congregation in Tokyo has begun to do the same.

KIU-SHIU MISSION

Founded: 1869. Sphere: the Island of Kiu-Shiu. Diocese: Kiu-Shiu. Bishop: Arthur Lea. Japanese clergymen: 10. Foreign clergymen: 6. Other foreign missionaries: 14. Christian adherents: 1639. (For other statistics see pp. xii–xv.) Principal stations: Nagasaki, Saseho, Kokura, Oita, Kagoshima, and Kumamoto.

THE General Report of the Kiu-Shiu Mission emphasizes the need of concentration on a few strong Churches and the defectiveness of work among women, for whom more missionaries are greatly needed. This comparatively small diocese is now third among the seven dioceses of the Japanese Church in its contributions. There seem to be a more friendly feeling and sympathetic understanding of missionary work among the Japanese than formerly, but an impatient desire for quick results sometimes leads to hasty baptisms followed by leakage from the Church. The standard of workers needs to be raised, and the great financial stringency stands in the way of this. As is natural, the abler men and women go to better paid work, yet some C.M.S. workers have refused outside posts with four times the salary paid by the Mission.

A more friendly feeling

Kumamoto

The Rev. S. Painter baptized an interesting group of people at Kumamoto on Christmas Day. He writes: "A family of three, consisting of the father (an ex-prison warder), mother, and daughter, first heard the Gospel some twenty years ago in Hokkaido. After a long time in making up their minds they were baptized together. Two young ladies were baptized in their own names, but asked to be also called Martha and Mary, as they were great friends. Another candidate was a schoolmistress, while the remaining three came from the village of Nankan." The Rev. C. O. Pickard-Cambridge baptized a student in the Kumamoto normal school, who hopes to become a Christian educationalist. Miss F. M. Freeth writes:—

A very strange opening has lately been given us. We have been asked to give Christian talks to some geisha girls. At present we get a warm welcome; I am allowed to teach exactly what I like, and come into direct contact with the girls, and we are becoming friends, but I cannot help wondering for how long it will be allowed. The other day a neighbouring geisha "mother" brought in her family of girls, and asked that they might be taught too. The master of the house, as well as being owner of these girls (they are all literally bought) is an usurer. He is reading the New Testament, taking notes as he does, so that he may know what the girls are being taught.

Kagoshima

At Kagoshima a Christian doctor has built a dispensary in which he intends to treat poor patients free of cost on Sundays. The variety of ways in which the Scriptures are circulated is illustrated by the case of a prominent Japanese official in Formosa, who was not a declared Christian, but spent the sum of 50 yen (£5) in purchasing Bibles and New Testaments to give to his friends as New Year presents.

HOKKAIDO MISSION

Founded: 1874. Sphere: within the island of Hokkaido. Diocese: Hokkaido (see vacant). Japanese clergymen: 10. Foreign clergymen: 2. Other foreign missionaries: 8. Christian adherents: 3392. (For other statistics see pp. xii–xv.) Principal stations: Hakodate and Sapporo.

Ainu

Archdeacon J. Batchelor says that the aboriginal Ainu are fast dying out, partly through the spread of tuberculosis and partly by reason of the difficulty in getting food owing to high prices. The Christian congregations gathered from among them are therefore dwindling. The growing Churches are from among the Japanese of this northern island. Two of the Churches in the island are now self-supporting. Archdeacon Batchelor had supposed that the younger generation of Ainu no longer wished to be addressed in their own language, but they asked him to do so, saying that though they understood Japanese they could feel better what was said when their own language was used. In the coal district of Hokkaido many Korean miners are employed, and the Archdeacon addressed a number of them (Christians it appears) by interpretation. Among the Japanese many Buddhist priests know a good deal of the Bible. One of them said that he usually chose the text for his discourse, with a suitable change of names, from the Bible. While feeling that we must "Japanize Christianity, as well as Christianize Japan," Archdeacon Batchelor, in common with many others, insists that the foreigner is still needed and will be for some time to come. From Muroran, Miss M. R. Jex-Blake writes that the pagan husband of a Christian lady, who is an official in a commercial company, forbade his wife to attend church for fear of offending his superiors. The lady obeyed but holds Christian meetings in her own house. Hers is not the only case in which a Christian woman has been kept away from worship by her husband.

Canada

NORTH-WEST CANADA MISSIONS

Founded: 1822. Sphere: within Western Canada. Dioceses: (1) Rupert's Land, (2) Keewatin, (3) Moosonee, (4) Calgary, (5) Saskatchewan, (6) Athabasca, (7) Mackenzie River, (8) Yukon. Bishops: (1) Samuel Pritchard Matheson, (2) Joseph Lofthouse, (3) John George Anderson, (4) William Cyprian Pinkham, (5) Jervois Arthur Newnham, (6) Edwin Frederick Robins, (7) James Richard Lucas, (8) Isaac O. Stringer. (For statistics see pp. xii–xv.)

THE incorporation of the Missions in this far-flung line with the Canadian Church will shortly take place, and the work of the various stations will be carried on in connexion with the dioceses in which they are situated, and in several of which former C.M.S. missionaries are now bishops. The centenary of the ecclesiastical province of Rupert's Land, which embraces the larger part of these Missions, is to take place in October, 1920. The Archbishop of Rupert's Land writes :—

Centenary of Rupert's Land Province

> We can take you to the sacred spot where John West first planted the ensign of the Cross and where he erected his first little building into which he admitted his first Indian boy as a pupil, a boy who afterwards became a priest of the Church of God and a missionary to his own people. We can show you how that little building on the banks of the Red River has grown into hundreds of churches and parsonages and parish halls, over the length and breadth of that vast land, and how that one missionary has multiplied into hundreds and hundreds, including bishops, priests, and deacons, and how that one little mission centre has grown into ten dioceses. Deo gratias.

The C.M.S. echoes this thanksgiving and prays for a blessing on these Missions of the Canadian Church far greater than any that has yet been seen.

Letters from missionaries express their feeling of regret at parting from the C.M.S., but of hope for the future. These Missions have suffered a severe loss in the death of the Rev. H. Girling, who had worked devotedly among the Eskimo of the farthest north. The veteran Dr. E. J. Peck recently returned from a great northern tour in which he celebrated thirty marriages and baptized sixty-nine adults.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MISSION

Founded: 1857. Sphere: within British Columbia. Dioceses: Caledonia and Columbia. Bishops: Frederick Herbert DuVernet (Archbishop) and John Charles Roper. Christian adherents: 1899. (For statistics see pp. xii–xv.) Principal stations Metlakahtla, Kincolith, Aiyansh, and Alert Bay.

Healing of a schism

THE schism which took place in 1887, when the late Mr. W. Duncan, after long and faithful missionary services, separated from the C.M.S., carrying with him the Indian community of Metlakahtla, has happily been healed. A deputation of them came to Archdeacon W. H. Collison, at Kincolith, on Easter Day pleading for forgiveness and asking to be united with the Church.

Both at Metlakahtla and at Kincolith the Church Army has greatly helped the work. At the latter place a commodious hall has been erected for the Army, the material and labour for which were supplied by the Indians, the missionary laying the foundation stone. This village and two others are lighted by electricity procured from river power. Japanese, Hindus, and others, brought into these parts by the logging industry, have been favourably influenced by the native Christians. The eastern and the western advanced guards of the C.M.S. have thus come into contact, and the work of missionaries on the Pacific coast is seconding that of their brothers in India and Japan. May these western "Indians" do their share in helping the Church of British Columbia to grapple with the great task of evangelizing the incoming Oriental.

PROPER FORMS OF A BENEFACTION TO THE SOCIETY BY WILL

No. I.—Form of a Bequest of a Common Legacy

I give and bequeath to the Treasurer for the time being of the Church Missionary Society for Africa and the East the sum of Pounds free of duty[1] for the general purposes of the said Society such sum and the duty thereon to be paid within calendar months next after my death. And I declare that the receipt of the Treasurer for the time being of the said Society shall be an effectual discharge for the said Legacy.

No. II.—Form of Bequest of the Residue or a share of the Residue

I give and bequeath unto the Treasurer for the time being of the Church Missionary Society for Africa and the East for the general purposes of the said Society my Residuary Real and Personal Estate [or if a share only of the Residue is intended to be given, then, instead of the words in Italics, say "such sum of money as shall be equal to one-fourth or one-half (according to the intention) of my whole Residuary Real and Personal Estate"]. And I declare that the receipt of the Treasurer for the time being of the said Society shall be an effectual discharge for the said Residue [or sum of money as the case may be]. And as to the remainder (if any) of my general Residuary Estate I bequeath the same, etc.

[1] If so intended.
